The green 1940 Ford coupe in which the killers of Ward Loveless, Washington attorney, fled from his Leesburg, Va., home, was recovered early today in Cumberland, Ky., 500 miles from the scene of the murder.

Police of all neighboring States immediately joined in an intensive manhunt for two slender-built, teen-age youths, who were known to have left the car parked in an alley of the mining country town.

According to James Hogg, Cumberland chief of police, identity of the two youths is known.

Boys Visited Relatives There

The youths, one 16 years of age and the other 18, drove into the Kentucky mountain community Tuesday afternoon, Chief Hogg said, and visited the home of one boy's aunt.

They remained in Cumberland until about 7 o'clock last night, when they suddenly vanished, abandoning the coupe.

Chief Hogg said he was told that the youths left the town hurriedly after reading a Knoxville (Tenn.) newspaper with an account of the brutal slaying of Loveless, who was bludgeoned and shot to death early Monday morning in his manor house at Peon Springs, Va., 7 miles northwest of Leesburg.

The two youths, Cumberland police asserted, were West Virginia mountain boys, who hailed from a nearby town across the State border.

Commonwealth's Attorney Charles Harrison, Sheriff Paul Alexander, of Loudoun County, and State Trooper E. D. Helm left Leesburg early this morning for Cumberland by motor.

Leesburg Youth Suspect

Just before State Trooper Helm left for the Kentucky town he said: "One of the two boys disappeared from Leesburg at the time of the murder, and has been a suspect from the beginning. He had been working and living in Leesburg, and had originally come from Bluefield, W. Va."

U. S. Pilots May Fly Ships to Britain And Near East

Military officials indicated last night that the Army Air Corps Ferry Command may soon begin flying warplanes across the Atlantic to Britain and the Near East.

As deliveries of American-made bombers increase, it was said, Army pilots may assist the British-Canadian organization, "ATFERO," in flying them across.

A War Department press release outlining the work of the Ferry Command declared that "although up to the present time the Air Corps Ferry Command itself flies ships across the Atlantic, it is responsible for getting them to takeoff points" and added that it is "so integrated that its operations can be changed as the theater of war changes." It was authoritatively stated that this indicated that transatlantic trips may be in view.

Post Interview

Aunt of Loveless Suspect Tells of Pair's Visit to Home

In an exclusive telephone interview with The Post, Mrs. Ollie Carroll, the aunt of one of the youths who abandoned the green Ford coupe of Ward Loveless in front of her home in Cumberland, Ky., early today said:

"My nephew came to see me Tuesday morning. He was with a young friend whom he called Tommy."

"They said that they had been driving around in Illinois and just stopped off to see me because they were in the vicinity of Cumberland."

"It had been a year since I had seen my nephew and, of course, I was taken by surprise. They came in a green Ford coupe which they said belonged to the other boy's father in Norfolk, Va."

"Well, they stayed on at my house since Tuesday, going out from time to time. I don't know where they went or what they did."

"However, last night at about 7 o'clock the Knoxville paper came. I picked it up and read all about the murder in Leesburg, Va. The boys were in the room with me, and when I put the paper down, they picked it up and began to read."

"When they had read for a short time, they abruptly got up and walked out. I was curious about the way they acted and looked at the paper again. They apparently left when they read the part about the green Ford coupe."

"After they had gone, I noticed they hadn't taken the car with them. It was parked out in front of the house. I walked out and saw the Virginia license. Then I became more suspicious and reported it to police."

Mrs. Carroll said: "They didn't have any jewelry or any watch that may have belonged to the murdered man that I saw. Neither did they have a gun that See AUNT, Page 10, Column 4."

Jackson Urges Law to Speed Judges' Ouster

Present Procedure Protects Crooked Jurists, Justice Says

By the Associated Press

A Supreme Court justice and the Attorney General, appealing yesterday for a new and speedier method of ousting Federal judges, declared that some of these jurists should have been removed for "misbehavior."

Associate Justice Robert H. Jackson and Attorney General Francis Biddle testified before a Senate Judiciary Subcommittee that the present method of impeachment by the House and trial by the Senate was "too cumbersome" and that the alternative of criminal trial could not be invoked against some Federal judges.

Too Busy for Trials

They advocated a bill already passed by the House which Chairman Sumners (Democrat), of Texas, of the House Judiciary Committee told Senators would help "get rid of these crooked judges."

Sumners explained that under the House-approved bill ouster proceedings against any Federal circuit or district judge could be originated by the Attorney General or the House, and if the House approved the resolution, a civil trial would be held by three Federal judges appointed by the Chief Justice of the United States.

Sensors were much too busy to be trying minor Federal judges, Representative Sumners said, adding that was why he as chairman of the House Judiciary Committee had declined to start impeachment action against Judge J. Warren Davis, who resigned as a Third Circuit Court judge within the week.

Appearance Unusual

Both Justice Jackson, former Attorney General, and Biddle, his successor, mentioned Judge Davis by name as an example of the difficulty in removing a Federal judge. Davis resigned after juries at Philadelphia twice disagreed in trying him on See JUDGES, Page 5, Column 4.

Biddle Reveals Nazi Blueprint For U. S. Setup

Reich Agent's Chart Covers All Phases Of American Life

By the Associated Press

A detailed blueprint for the organization of Nazi propaganda networks in the United States, acquired by Department of Justice operatives from a German agent, was revealed yesterday by Attorney General Francis Biddle.

The carefully worked out chart, designed to fit the needs of Hitler's propaganda machine in every quarter of the globe, was presented by the Attorney General as illustrating the urgent need for tightened legislative control of Nazi activities in this country.

Specifically, he referred to it as showing the strict control Germany exerts over her agents and thus as another pressing reason for the enactment of the new Foreign Agents Registration Act, pending in the Senate, which would drastically broaden the Justice Department's power over foreign agents.

The organization chart was taken directly from an organization manual of the National Socialist German Workers Party, Biddle asserted. He said that the manual was taken from the possession of a known Nazi agent, but refused to divulge any information about the individual involved.

Enlistments Lag, Navy Weighs Draft

Lagging volunteer enlistments for the Navy may require the Nation to partly man its projected two-ocean fleet with selectees, it was disclosed yesterday.

Enlistments, running several thousand a week below anticipated schedules, also are leading to consideration of plans for physically rehabilitating many who have failed to pass examinations.

Still Time to Give

Community Chest Drive, Short Of Goal, to Continue a Week

Lacking almost one-third of its two-million-dollar quota, the Community Chest will be unable to close its campaign today, and 10,000 volunteers will continue their drive for another week to raise funds for the care of the District's sick and needy.

The announcement yesterday by J. Clifford Folger, the Chest's chairman, that the campaign must be extended, immediately brought new pleas for aid to the Chest.

Secretary of the Navy Frank Knox, in a special statement, called upon Washingtonians to assure the campaign's success.

"Our home defense front," he said, "is protected by the agencies in our Washington Community Chest. These agencies must fight a battle for our less fortunate neighbors, a battle which is particularly important in time of crisis, for upon its success depends the health, courage, morale and self-respect of our people less fortunate than ourselves."

The Secretary of the Navy and Rear Admiral Ross T. McIntyre held a "council of war" yesterday with Chairman Folger in order to devise some way of stimulating a 100 per cent response from 15,341 Navy Department employees.

Another plea for the Community Chest came from Lord Halifax, British Ambassador to the United States. See CHEST, Page 4, Column 2.

Prices Bill Opposition Is Gaining

Administration Unit In House Worried Despite Victory On Gore Measure

By Robert De Vore

Post Staff Writer

The Administration's bid for far-reaching price-control powers yesterday picked up enough opposition on both sides of the House to give the Democratic leadership cause for worry.

The leaders won a victory in overwhelming the Gore bill which would have clamped blanket restrictions on commodity prices and wages. The score against the measure was 218 to 63.

But it was a cheap victory and no indication of the competition to be faced tomorrow when, it appeared last night, a real threat to send the bill back to committee must be overcome.

Major Test Delayed

A last-minute decision to start the second Thanksgiving recess last night held off the first major test on the bill—a vote on the Banking Committee's amendment to restore to the measure unrestrained buying and selling powers once denied the Administration.

Had the House remained in session a few minutes longer, a vote in all probability would have been taken on the amendment, sought by the Administration, but bitterly opposed by a coalition of Republicans and conservative Democrats.

Whether it was intended or not, the move gave the leadership 48 hours in which to reform ranks against the final assault. Speaker Sam Rayburn last night declined to comment on prospects except to say: "I believe everything will turn out all right. I think that now, but I don't know what I will think tomorrow."

Buying, Selling Measure

At least three battles must be fought on the House floor before the bill can become law, expected to come in the final minutes of tomorrow's session.

The first will be over the buying and selling amendment. This is a provision permitting the price administrator to buy, store or sell any foreign or domestic commodity for the double purpose of subsidizing high-cost producers of needed materials and assisting price stabilization.

Republicans called the provision a "diabolical scheme" and a "repulsive" menace to free enterprise.

Mild Weather

Continues Today

Washington weather will continue mild as pink lemonade today, a condition expected to last until the weekend. The temperature will hit 80 degrees today, it was said, although a low of 30 degrees was forecast last night, a reminder that fall is still with us.

65 Cents Per Hour for Killing Flies

Senators Call Story of Waste On Tennessee Plant 'Shocking'

By the Associated Press

Helzel added that he himself had his own father on the payroll at one time at 65 cents an hour in the rubber boot department, and "all he did was kill flies."

It was, he said, "rather the practice of every sub-department head to hire at least one relative to work under him." Frequently, he added, men reported for work and found nothing to do, and sometimes received double time while thus idle.

Thomas testified that Brewer, an assistant and a secretary drove to Milan from a project at Mineral Wells, Tex., in three separate automobiles, rented at Government expense. When the rental exceeded the cost of the cars, the aide a second, and a third was driven by Miss Alma Campbell from Mineral Wells, Tex.

"Why was Miss Campbell provided with a car at Government expense?" Fulton asked.

The witness said Miss Campbell was Brewer's secretary.

Truman remarked she formerly was a hostess at a Mineral Wells hotel.

U. S. Rejects 'Pacific Munich;' Britain Opens New Tank Drive; Pincers Tightening on Moscow

Panzer Drive East Of Tula After Break-Through At Stalinogorsk

By the Associated Press

London, Nov. 26.—Powerful German forces have achieved a new break-through southeast of Moscow and have turned north in the opening phases of a developing battle of encirclement, official Soviet advice acknowledged tonight.

The break-through was in the Stalinogorsk sector 120 miles southeast of Moscow, and east of the contested town of Tula. The Germans, using tanks, planes and infantry, advanced to the outskirts of a town identified in the Soviet dispatches only as "V," but which may have been Venev, 40 miles northwest of Stalinogorsk and a little more than 100 miles southeast of Moscow.

1000 Nazis Wiped Out

"Tonight an official report said that more than 1000 German officers and men had been wiped out in a two-day battle for 'V.'"

At least some of the German forces have swung back west from "V," the dispatches said, apparently with the object of encircling Tula and cutting off the highway between Tula and Serpukhov, which is 50 miles south of Moscow.

In broader outline, however, the drive east of Tula appeared to be the long southern arm of the pincers on Moscow itself, reaching northward in an effort to block off the Red capital from the east.

West and southwest of Moscow, at Moshalsk and Mdojarslavets, the Russians said new German attacks were beaten back, but they admitted the Nazis had occupied several villages in the vicinity of Klin, 30 miles northwest of Moscow. In the same sector the recapture of five other settlements was claimed, however, as the result of counterattacks by both tanks and cavalry.

Compared to Verdun

German losses on the Moscow front, it was declared by S. A. Loxovsky, vice commissar of foreign affairs at Kuibyshev, already exceeded the 330,000 dead and wounded which the imperial German armies lost at Verdun in the first great war.

He estimated further that 7,000 Germans had been killed in the fighting for Rostov-on-Don, on the southern front, and that there were 30,000 German casualties in the area northwest of Rostov.

In the latest development of the Russian counterassault above Rostov, Soviet dispatches said the Germans had been pushed back six more miles in sectors where they already had lost from 37 to 60 miles, and had been dislodged from new entrenchments.

'Battle of Annihilation'

Empire Forces Begin Offensive To Knock Nazis Out of Libya

By International News Service

Cairo (Thursday), Nov. 27.—Their steel ranks reinforced by fleets of new American-made tanks, armies from every section of the British Empire today suddenly opened up their second great tank offensive in multiple drives to force a quick decision in Libya.

The new "battle of annihilation" centered on the key Rezegh sector, where the remainder of Gen. Erwin Rommel's armored Axis divisions are lined up. Other clashes brought mechanized forces together at Tobruk, in the Bardia zone, north of Sidi Omar, and far to the south in the Gialo Oasis area.

A column of motorized New Zealand reinforcements, accompanied by tanks, fought its way westward from the captured East Libyan port of Gambut, then split into two sections. One fork joined hands with the South African infantry and British tank forces engaged in the Rezegh sector. The other fork swerved north, outflanked Axis positions, and drew up on the bluff of the escarpment overlooking Tobruk.

Spread out below on the narrow pass between the escarpment and Tobruk were increased forces of Italians and Germans, battling to keep the British from breaking up the epic siege.

From their heights, the New Zealanders were able to hurl shells on the Axis troops 600 feet below.

Indian troops struck across the Egyptian frontier and pressed down on Sidi Omar Nuovo, a few miles north of Sidi Omar.

C.I.O. May Rejoin DMB; Parley On Labor Disputes Suggested

Murray Proposes Joint Conference To Weigh Problem

By Alfred Friendly

Post Staff Writer

Amid persistent rumors that the Congress of Industrial Organizations contemplated a return of its representatives to the National Defense Mediation Board, C. I. O. president Philip Murray yesterday proposed that President Roosevelt convene a national Government-labor-industry conference to work out a "voluntary" plan for the peaceful settlement of labor disputes.

Murray's conference proposal, similar to that urged for many weeks by key Administration labor officials to forestall antistrike legislation, was accompanied by well-founded reports that C. I. O. circles had under consideration a return of their officials to the board from which they resigned November 11 in bitter protest at its decision against the C. I. O. United Mine Workers.

Protested Union Shop Ruling

At that time, Murray, Thomas Kennedy, U. M. W. secretary, and the five alternate members of the mediation agency declared that labor could no longer place "confidence" in the board's deliberations. They objected to the decision against granting a union shop to the miners in steel company owned collieries on the grounds that it was not based on the merits of the case.

An informed source declared yesterday that it was still "too early" to know what course the C. I. O. would follow, but that officials might consider a return to the board based on certain conditions.

Present Members Acceptable

The principal ones, it was indicated, were that the board agree to return to its "old basis" of considering each labor controversy on its merits alone, and that whenever the full board sat on a dispute it would eliminate participation by the A. F. of L. representatives if the case in-

Both Houses Push Work on Bills To Prevent Strikes

By Robert C. Albright

Post Staff Writer

A foot race to enact labor legislation developed yesterday in House and Senate, as the Senate Labor Committee ordered hearings and bill sponsors on both sides of the Capitol scrambled for a way.

Operation from both organized labor groups to any of the legislation failed to stem conflicting bids for action in half a dozen House and Senate committees.

Last to move was the long-relied-upon Senate Labor Committee. Senator Hill (Democrat), of Alabama, Senator majority whip and chairman of the Senate Labor Subcommittee, called an executive meeting today and scheduled hearings starting tomorrow.

First Draft Completed

In the House, Representative Ramspeck (Democrat), of Georgia, under House Labor Committee orders, completed the first draft of the so-called Administration plan, involving "cooling off" conciliation and compulsory arbitration if a Mediation Board settlement fails.

In the Senate, Senator Connally (Democrat), of Texas, planned Judiciary Committee clearance this week of his bill to seize strike-bound plants and freeze labor conditions therein, and Senate action next week.

Connally asked time to appear as a witness before the House Labor Committee today in an effort to persuade that group to accept his draft in lieu of the Ramspeck measure.

And in an extraordinary meeting last night the House Judiciary Committee considered action of its own if the Labor Committee's measure does not go far enough. One member said it was decided the Judiciary Committee will throw in a bill "with teeth in it," if it feels, after the Labor group reports on Friday, that the latter has not been drastic enough.

Secretary of State, Hull last night handed to Japan's special "peace envoy" to Washington, Saburo Kurusu, a document rejecting suggestions for a "Pacific Munich" and reaffirming America's long-standing refusal to recognize Japanese conquests in China.

The sixth—and possibly the last—conference between Hull and Kurusu was followed by a State Department announcement that the United States Government is not retreating from any of the basic principles which have governed its far Eastern policies.

Neither Hull nor Kurusu gave any indication last night as to whether or how soon they might meet again, but the American note was not thought to have closed the door on all possibilities of further negotiation.

At the same time, it was felt in many quarters that war or peace in the Pacific may hinge on Japan's next move.

The announcement was interpreted as a denial of reports that this country might agree to a "stop-gap" arrangement sanctioning Japanese occupation of certain areas of China in return for Japan's withdrawal from the Axis and a promise to refrain from further aggression.

Paraguay Foils Bloodless Coup By Pro-Axis Group

Rio de Janeiro, Brazil, Nov. 26 (AP)—Reliable sources said tonight that President Higinio Moronino of Paraguay has defeated a bloodless coup d'etat of pro-Axis color after a three-day crisis beginning November 19.

During the period heavy army reserves were called into Asuncion and mounted troops patrolled the streets at night.

The dispute, it was reported, started when President Moronino refused a request of Police Chief Luis Santiviago for special honors for the body of former President Eduardo Schaerer, who died November 11 in Buenos Aires. Schaerer was the founder of the pro-Axis political entity called the "Schaeristas."

Foe Circled in Libya, Nazis Say; 2 Americans Reported Captured

British Troops Have Lost Offensive, Berlin Declares

By the Associated Press

Berlin, Nov. 26.—Gen. Erwin Rommel's forces have succeeded in encircling British forces in the battle of Libya, the Nazi news agency D. N. B. reported today.

German military sources said the action could no longer be regarded as a British offensive.

The German high command declared that a German submarine had hit a British battleship heavily in a torpedo attack off Salum, Egypt.

A German submarine was officially credited with having sunk a British cruiser of the Dragon class in the Atlantic.

(Eight 6-inch gun vessels of 4,850 tons each make up the British "D" class and they carry from 450 to 469 men. The Dragon, launched December 29, 1917, is the oldest of the group. In response to a Berlin announcement earlier that the Dragon herself had been sunk, the London ministry of information flatly denied she had been attacked.)

A special communique reported these developments at sea with a declaration that "the British navy in past days again has suffered heavy losses." It noted that a large British warship was listed yesterday as having been hit by an aerial torpedo.

Informed quarters said German and Italian units scored further successes in northern Africa and the number of prisoners and booty was growing steadily.

Strong British tank forces were annihilated, D. N. B. continued. It declared that renewed sallies from the British-held port of Tobruk were frustrated.

Gen. Rommel was declared to have staged off attacks and encircled the British with numerical inferior forces.

Stake dive-bombers were declared to have shot down seven British planes in the battle of Libya.

Destroyers Flee British Sink 2 Axis Ships Off Libya

By Larry Allen

Associated Press Staff Writer

Aboard the Flagship Queen Elizabeth with the British Mediterranean Fleet Off Libya, Nov. 26.—Smashing salvos from the 6-inch guns of British cruisers have dealt another damaging blow to the supply lines of Gen. Erwin Rommel's hard-pressed African corps, sinking two Libya-bound merchant ships believed to be laden with men and gasoline.

They went down in flames, abandoned by their conveying destroyers, reports to the British command in chief said.

(The London admiralty last night reported the sinkings occurred Monday.)

The cruisers which intercepted the convoy were ranging far west of the main British battle fleet, making a wide sweep of the seaplanes to Tripoli, from which reinforcements might be moved overland to Gen. Rommel's armored divisions.

Destroyers Driven Off

Signals received by the flagship Queen Elizabeth indicated the destroyers sighted the convoy and several destroyers just before dusk Monday.

The cruisers reported they engaged the destroyers, which sped off without giving battle, then turned their guns on the merchantmen.

They sank within half an hour.

The success of the cruisers spurred one of the most intensive hunts for Axis ships I have seen in many months.

This flagship and other battleships, cruisers and destroyers swept far to the west, but their vigil by day and night failed to disclose any other convoys headed either for Tripoli or Benghazi.

At the same time, these other units of the British fleet are keeping close watch along the eastern Libyan coast, ready to give battle should an Italian war fleet move out for a sea battle or in an attempt to intercept British vessels transporting troops and supplies to Tobruk.

Several times during the last four days swing through the Mediterranean, Axis aircraft flew near the British warships, but each time they encountered heavy anti-aircraft barrages.

For more than an hour they swooped low, trying to come into torpedo range, but encountering heavy fire from pompons and 4.5-inch guns of the destroyers. Then more destroyers joined in the firing and the planes flew off.

U. S. Observers Seized With British Writers In Desert, Rome Says

Copyright by New York Times

Rome, Nov. 26.—Two American observers as well as several American and British war correspondents were captured by the Axis forces near Regeh in Libya during the encirclement and annihilation of the British forces in that area, it was stated in today's Italian war bulletin.

Five thousand British soldiers and a second British general, B. F. Armstrong, were said to have been captured also.

The communique identified Armstrong as the commander of the brigade of the first South African Division.

Americans Not Named

(Earlier this week the Italians reported the capture of a Gen. Spertling, who could not be identified in London.)

There was no information here tonight regarding the names of the American observers and newspapermen who were captured.

"On the Salum front," the communique said, "all the fierce attacks launched by fully three enemy divisions against the positions held by the Savona Division had been broken by the iron resistance of our troops. The attacking forces have suffered further sanguinary losses and have not succeeded in realizing any successes. . . . A relieving action by us is under way with results which are already evident."

To complete the picture for Cyrenaica, it stated that British attempts to approach the Bardia fortifications were driven off with heavy losses while the imperial forces in the Tobruk zone confined themselves to artillery barrages.

British announced the capture of Bardia several days ago.

Down in the central desert it is admitted that the Italian garrison at Gialo Oasis was overwhelmed and surrendered. But it is claimed that the imperial column is being constantly subjected to bombing and machine-gunning from the air, with 15 vehicles set afire and 50 others damaged yesterday.

The communique also announces that an Italian submarine has failed to return to its base.

At the same time, these other units of the British fleet are keeping close watch along the eastern Libyan coast, ready to give battle should an Italian war fleet move out for a sea battle or in an attempt to intercept British vessels transporting troops and supplies to Tobruk.

Ribbentrop Says Nazis Can Fight 30 Years

By the United Press

Berlin, Nov. 26.—Foreign Minister Von Ribbentrop said today that the Nazis would not prevent an Axis victory, that "Europe" was prepared, if necessary, to fight "a 30-year war," and that the British Isles will be destroyed—"on land, on the sea, and in the air."

For 1 hour and 5 minutes before a hand-picked audience at a luncheon in the Kaiserhof Hotel, Ribbentrop derided Britain, the United States and Russia; Prime Minister Churchill and President Roosevelt. Among his listeners were representatives of 11 of the states which yesterday renewed the anti-Comintern pact.

The speech, broadcast throughout Germany, enumerated these other principal points:

1. Russia already is beaten and will not last long.

2. Germany has not extended any recent peace offers and will not do so.

3. There will be no revolt in Europe and Germany will never capitulate.

4. Japan is creating a new order in the Asiatic sphere.

5. It is nonsense that Germany is planning a world religious congress, that she has planned to carve up South America into Axis-dominated states.

There is "no hatred" between the German and American people, Ribbentrop said, and the "idea of an attack by Germany against the United States is, militarily, simply fantastic nonsense."

America under President Roosevelt, Ribbentrop said, is becoming constantly "more and more isolated and getting dragged into war against half the world."

Ribbentrop believed that "the American catastrophe of 1929 will be child's play by comparison with what will stand at the end of this Roosevelt war and economic policy."

President Roosevelt, by his alliance with Soviet Russia, has, we are convinced, sown the seed for a devastating social catastrophe which will some day rock the American people and set them back decades," Ribbentrop said.

Ribbentrop said that if war should come some day between the United States on one side and Europe and East Asia on the other, "then the responsibility lies with President Roosevelt."

He said the "American war mongers" needed to talk about the possibility of a German attack because they need those catch phrases to camouflage their own intentions. . . . They give orders to shoot and fire on German ships and pretend to be outraged when German ships defend themselves."

He charged the President previously had gone so far that, in 1938 after Munich "it amounted to a threat against the English Chamberlain and the little Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain" government, that he would apply the thumb-screws if they (British) had an intention of reaching a settlement with the Fuehrer on the Polish question."

"According to declarations of high German officials," he said, "the bombardment to which Belgrade has been subjected will be nothing compared with what is now in store for the city."

"The Germans have decided to raze Belgrade, which will be surrounded by troops and exposed to bombardment by artillery and from the air."

He said the reason behind the German plan is that the Nazi army believes Belgrade is to be the base of operations for the Chetniks. He added in answer to a question that the White House was disclosing the plans in the interest of disseminating information.

The President's Day

By International News Service

FIRING SQUAD: Some of the report reading the President has been doing lately filtered outward yesterday with his Spokesman Steve Early's announcement about the doom of Belgrade. United States Intelligence reports to the President say the Nazis have decided to bombard Belgrade off the map to break up the resistance of the fighting Chetniks.

LINE TO THE RIGHT: Within 45 minutes in the morning Mr. Roosevelt polished off a lengthy queue of callers, completed innumerable memos. First in were Fay Allen Des Portes, United States Minister to Guatemala, and Delpino Sanchez Latour, chief of Guatemalan protocol. Handshakes, traditional glad-to-meet-yous, bows from the waist were exchanged. Next came Labor OPMer Hillman. Gov. Charles Edison, son of the late inventor and New Jersey's chief, hadn't seen his friend Roosevelt in some time—came in to talk over a few matters.

UNFAIR: A. F. of L. twins, William Green and Mathew Woll, looked mad, told the President they were "unalterably and uncompromisingly" opposed to "antilabor" legislation. The President promised to consider the whole picture in that light.

FEW RETIRE: Senator George Norris, "grand old man of the Republican Party," came to lunch with his No. 1 admirer, told him he intended to retire—and make it stick this time. Last time Norris announced his intention of not running again, settling back to enjoy his 80s, Fan Roosevelt publicly urged him to reconsider. But at 81, the "grand old man" feels he must make way for younger blood, got the President to give his permission.

CHINS UP: Chinese Ambassador Hu Shih, Chinese financial wizard, Dr. T. V. Soong, talked at great length with great seriousness about matters which must be kept under the hat, departed with chin up, lips buttoned an hour later.

JAPANESE JINGO: In midafternoon Secretary of State Hull scooted across the street, into a huddle with the President on the Japanese situation. After the powwow, Hull scheduled a meeting with Nipponese Envoys Kuruu and Nomura.

Recruiting Drops, Navy Eyes Draft

An Explanation

Knox Denies Articles Gave Him Profit

Secretary of Navy Knox said yesterday that he had not profited from the sale of magazine articles published under his name since entering the Cabinet.

He declared at his press conference that two editorials published about him had "gotten his goat," and read them to reporters. One, published by the Waterloo (Iowa) Courier, charged that he had been selling to magazines information denied to newspapers. The other, appearing in the Jacksonville (Fla.) Times-Union, accused him of "peddling secret information."

Knox said the articles appearing under his name had been authorized because he believed part of his job was to "popularize and publicize" the Navy.

No compensation was discussed as to the first article, written for the Saturday Evening Post, and he was "surprised" when he received a check for $1000, Knox said. The fee was split between the magazine's staff writer and the naval officer who actually wrote it, the Secretary added.

Rear Admiral Charles R. Train, retired, head of the Navy Relief Society, then told reporters that Knox had endorsed over to the society a check for $1000 from Colliers, a check for $750 from the Saturday Evening Post for the English rights to publication of his article, a check for $400 from Liberty and a check for $750 from the American Magazine. The total, Train said, was $2225.75.

As for releasing information not available to newspapers in the signed articles, Knox said that the only case of this he knew was a story that an American observer had been on the Catalina plane which located the German battleship Bismarck for the British navy.

He said he had learned that the Collier's staff writer had dug up the story and had cleared it with a Navy press official, who approved its publication because he considered the writer had gotten it on his own initiative.

Soldiers Entertained

Approximately 50 soldiers from nearby camps were entertained last night by the Brotherhood of East Washington Heights Baptist Church, Alabama and Branch Avenues Southeast. After a program of entertainment, the men were served sandwiches and coffee. The Rev. Glenn B. Faucett is pastor of the church.

Car Care

Beware of the High Cost of Traffic Fines

By getting your car in shape for cold weather now you may not only avoid heavy repair costs later—but you will be safe from fines imposed by D. C. traffic regulations.

Remember, brakes that slip or catch—poor lights—other car defects are no excuse for traffic accidents. The eight fines imposed by D. C. Commissioners for car defects can cost you a total of $68.00 if you are challenged by an officer—they are all correctable for only $5.00 by Call Carl, Washington's "Little Detroit." Avoid traffic troubles and costs before cold weather sets in—have Call Carl make those penalty-carrying repairs at minor costs. Drive in—day or night—at Brightwood, Northeast or Downtown.

Enlistments Fall 15% After Loss Of Kearny, James

By John G. Norris
Post Staff Writer

Naval officials disclosed yesterday that lagging volunteer enlistments may force the Nation to partly man its projected two-ocean fleet with selectees.

Outlining the Navy personnel situation at a press conference, Secretary Knox revealed that there has been a 15 per cent drop in recruiting since the United States destroyers Kearny and Reuben James were torpedoed with a loss of 111 lives. Even before this, he admitted, enlistments ran two or three thousand a month below requirements.

Knox and the Navy's personnel chief, Rear Admiral Chester W. Nimitz, outlined steps contemplated to speed up recruiting, and declared they hoped to keep the Navy entirely on a volunteer basis. Knox, however, added:

"No one can foretell the future, but with the swift expansion taking place we may have to resort to selectees."

Drop Laid to Parents

The Navy chief said the drop in recruiting during the past month or so has been almost entirely due to the fact that parents of youths under the age of 21 have withdrawn or withheld permission for their sons to enlist.

He added that this attitude has become less evident in the past few days and indicated a hope that it would disappear.

"A ship at sea is too small a place to maintain discipline and efficiency among men, some of whom may not wish to be there," Knox stated. "The Navy will be able to maintain high efficiency and morale only if the mothers and fathers of the United States continue to give consent to the enlistments of those thousands of red-blooded American boys who wish to volunteer for naval service."

Requires 13,000 Monthly

Admiral Nimitz said that the Navy had been recruiting between 10,000 and 11,000 men a month just before the Kearny and Reuben James attacks, dropping to 8,000 after these actions. Present requirements are 13,000 men per month, while beginning next July, 15,000 recruits will be needed monthly, he stated.

To stimulate enlistments, the Navy already has lowered physical requirements somewhat, principally as to eyes and teeth.

Recruiting Spurs Outlined

Nimitz outlined the following further steps by which the Navy hopes to obtain enough men to avoid using the draft:

Enlargement and intensification of the newspaper advertising campaign, which was said to have been highly successful to date.

Establishment of a rehabilitation program, under which men with remedial defects, such as a hernia, bad teeth or undernourishment, will be enlisted. Thereafter they will be operated on or built up to meet the Navy's requirements. More doctors and more money are necessary before this may be started.

Healey, Wyzanski Recommended as Federal Judges

The names of Representative Healey (Democrat), of Massachusetts, and Charles Wyzanski, Boston attorney, were sent to President Roosevelt yesterday for approval to be judges on the United States District Court in Massachusetts.

The recommendations were made by the Justice Department. Healey, long a staunch Administration supporter, was co-sponsor of the Walsh-Healey Public Contracts Act, first Federal legislation establishing minimum wages and maximum hours.

Recently the Massachusetts Legislature, in redistricting the State, made Healey's district strongly Republican.

Wyzanski has served the Federal Government in several capacities, arguing the Social Security Act test case before the Supreme Court and acting as legal adviser to officials of the Labor Department.

Million Troops From India Serve Britain, Envoy Reports

Sir Girja Shankar Bajpai, India's first diplomatic representative in the United States, yesterday asserted that his country has one million men under arms, from Libya to Singapore, and is "fighting for fulfillment of our hopes for a democratic way of life."

Seated below a picture of Thomas Jefferson in the F Street headquarters of the British Press Association, Sir Girja told his first Washington press conference that India's contribution to the war effort of the forces of the Axis "is not being made out of altruism."

"We are fighting for ourselves just as much as for Great Britain," he said. "Though India was brought up in the autocratic tradition we have learned to love the democratic way of life."

Agent-General for India

Sir Girja's official title is agent-general for India in the United States. He said yesterday his job covers the entire field of Indian-American relations, with the exception of certain aspects of British Empire foreign policy for which the British government in London, through Lord Halifax and the embassy here, is spokesman.

Closely questioned on the possible role of India in the event of war in the Pacific, the envoy pointed out that Indian troops are stationed in Malaya and Singapore, and added:

"Should events unfortunately demand it I have no doubt they would play as great a part in that area as they now do in the Middle East."

More Indian Officers

He spoke with pride of the service of Indian troops in the battle now raging in Libya, in the extended campaign against the Italian forces in Ethiopia and in the occupations of Iraq and Iran.

The envoy pointed out that the Indian army numbered only 230,000 men before the war. At the same time it has increased more than four-fold, he said, there has been a significant increase in the proportion of Indians in the officer ranks.

Funds Given Air Associates By War Dept.

The War Department revealed yesterday that it had advanced $500,000 in capital funds to Air Associates, Inc., at Bendix, N. J., in order to enable the company to fulfill its defense contracts.

The revelation was part of an official statement replying to charges by F. Leroy Hill, ousted president of the company, that the War Department by putting Army officers in control of the company's operations had conducted "unwarranted interference."

"There has been no such interference," the department said in a formal statement.

Likewise, it declared that there was "no truth in the statement that the company proposed Mr. Hill to be manager and that the War Department objected. No such proposal was ever made."

Raymond Hill is head of the Los Angeles Air Associates plant.

In announcing on November 19 his resignation and that of Harold I. Crow, vice president, Hill said the board of directors had asked the resignations "in order to comply with the demand of the War Department."

The War Department took over operation of the Air Associates plant on December 31 after labor difficulties had resulted in stoppage of production on large orders for airplane parts.

The War Department said that when it took possession of Air Associates it found that the company did not have means of meeting its obligations to banks and other creditors and an advance of $500,000 was agreed on in cooperation with the Navy "to remove the financial pressure and finance continued operation."

The statement added: "As part of the arrangement, the War Department asked for and received the assurance of the board of directors of the company that satisfactory management would be placed in charge, so that the War Department might withdraw from the plant and be reasonably assured of management in which it had confidence."

The president and his assistant then resigned at the suggestion of the board of directors.

For the future, the department declared "We have confidence that capable management will be obtained and that Army control can soon be withdrawn and operation resumed under private management."

France to Join Anti-Red Pact, Diplomats Say

By C. L. Sulzberger
Copyright by New York Times

Kulbyshov, Nov. 26.—Signature by France of the anti-Commintern pact in the not distant future is believed probable by well-advised foreign diplomatic circles here, who have received reports that Reichsfuehrer Hitler had planned to stage a peace conference on November 20.

However, since the advance on Moscow was badly slowed up during the last month and the British offensive in Libya has opened it is thought the Fuehrer is seeking to put new life into the Axis pact as an alternative plan.

The Germans definitely had hoped to be in the Soviet capital by the end of October, or early in November, it was reported, and were contemplating a new peace offensive along lines which have been hinted at on various occasions during the last two years.

The German failure in the main objective on the Eastern Front and the sudden outbreak of the Libyan offensive have shattered the project which Hitler was believed to have been entertaining.

Failing militarily to attain the position necessary to launch a peace campaign, Hitler is believed to realize that some sort of diplomatic move must be made which can be built up by the Axis press as a triumph. This, it is thought, will be the reviving and expanding of the old anti-Commintern pact.

The only countries in Europe which it is thought might conceivably have some important effect on the Russo-German war are Bulgaria and Turkey. Bulgaria, while very much in German hands, is not yet at war with the Soviet and formal diplomatic relations between Moscow and Sofia continue. It is believed here that the Slav sympathies of Bulgarians and the large agrarian movement there strongly oppose any idea of an open conflict with Russia and will keep that country out of the war unless Germany absolutely forces the issue.

Turkey's position remains one of devout aspirations to neutrality and nonbelligerence. But while German advances in the Ukraine and Crimea obviously worry Turkey somewhat, and make her perhaps slightly more subject to high-pressure diplomatic methods by Berlin, if Britain is able to clean up the Axis forces in Libya this should at least balance the scales.

Hitch Hinted In Nazi-French Accord Talks

By the Associated Press

New York, Nov. 26.—Reliable reports received in New York tonight suggested the possibility of a hitch in German-French negotiations, with Marshal Petain holding out against outright membership in the Axis.

These reports, coming from well-informed neutral sources, seemed to be supported by the failure of leaders of the two countries to meet the middle of this week, as expected.

Petaim's reported resistance to German bids was said to be based largely on recent war developments from the various fronts. His chief reasons were listed as these:

1. The Italians again have pressed their aspirations for French territory in recent talks with the Germans.

2. The French have received reports that German losses in Russia are extremely heavy, although not as great as the Russian claim of 6,000,000 Nazi casualties.

3. Uncertainty of the fighting in North Africa. This was coupled with reports that the Germans now have no large troop concentrations in Bulgaria, leading the French to believe that the Axis will be unable to develop a pincer movement against the Suez Canal this winter.

Informed sources pointed out that the Germans would not be likely to consent to a meeting with Vichy leaders until they were sure they would gain a satisfactory agreement for at least some form of collaboration, which they could claim as a new Axis victory.

Montgomery Fete Raises $490 for British Bundles

The Montgomery County Branch of Bundles for Britain raised $490 at a benefit dance recently held by the group. Mrs. E. Brooke Lee, chairman, announced yesterday at an executive board meeting at the home of Mrs. E. A. Merritt, Chevy Chase, chairman of the dance held at the Manor Club.

The Silver Spring committee headed by Mrs. J. Russell McQueen, will hold a rummage sale of used clothing in good condition Saturday from 9 a. m. until 5 p. m. at 8827 Georgia Avenue, Silver Spring. Mrs. W. J. Bloomer, chairman of the event, announced that the articles to be sold are not practical to send to England because they are mostly rayons and silks. There will also be a white elephant table and emblem stand.

Two Other Women Are Named In Torrance Murder Trial

Associated Press Wirephoto

DIDN'T KNOW OF DOCTOR'S MARRIAGE—Barbara Bowen, 28, member of a prominent Honolulu family, was reported by a San Francisco newspaper to have sailed for the United States expecting to marry Dr. Arthur F. Torrance on the day his wealthy bride of a month was killed in Mexico. Miss Bowen, the newspaper said, was unaware of the doctor's marriage until she read of his arrest on charges of murder.

By the Associated Press

Monterrey, Mexico, Nov. 26.—Names of two other women entered the murder trial tonight of Arthur Torrance, New York author and explorer accused of bludgeoning to death his 67-year-old wealthy bride. Criminal Judge Jesus B. Santos told reporters he had wired the San Francisco police chief to take a statement from Miss Barbara Bowen, 28-year-old Honolulu society girl who reportedly came to the mainland expecting to marry Torrance while he, unknown to her, was honeymooning with the former Mrs. Ada Loveland.

Earlier Richard Loveland, son of the dead woman, asked Torrance in the presence of Judge Santos whether he had not sent a wire after Mrs. Torrance's death. Upon the New Yorker's acknowledgment that he had, Loveland offered for the record a wire addressed to Vera Bowyer, of San Francisco. It started, "Dearest, withhold judgment," and ended, "Profound love, kiss mother."

Loveland put the names of the two women in the trial record at a session arranged by Judge Santos to bring accuser and accused face to face for the first time. It was on complaint of Loveland, Los Angeles attorney, that Torrance was arrested and charged with murder.

Earlier the 55-year-old Torrance said he had "nothing but esteem" for Miss Bowen but added: "Regarding any closer relations, I have nothing to say. I leave that to Barbara herself."

Torrance denied as an "utter lie" Loveland's charge that he reported by telephone the day of his bride's death that she already had been buried. Loveland insisted his wife had told him Torrance made such a statement in reporting Mrs. Torrance's death.

In San Francisco, relatives of Miss Bowen made it clear she would not go to Torrance's aid. "The affair is a closed incident," said Mrs. Manuel M. Garrett, the girl's aunt. The girl was unaware of Torrance's marriage until she read newspaper accounts of his arrest.

Her uncle, Col. Garrett, Lafayette, Calif., justice of the peace, said she was deeply shocked but not resentful.

"Barbara," he said, "despite her shock, considers she was more or less fortunate that things worked out this way."

Nazi Claims of Red Rout Held Unjustified

Geneva, Switzerland, Nov. 26 (AP). The Journal de Geneve said today that German claims regarding destruction of the Red army and Soviet war production were unjustified and that huge Russian reserves still exist in the Far East.

Attributing command of the Red army of the Far East to Marshal Vassily K. Blucher, the paper said he still has 20 divisions of infantry (360,000 men), six divisions of motorized troops and his entire force of heavy bombers untouched by the conflict in the west. Some forces from western Siberia have been drawn to the front, however, the paper said.

The paper estimated Soviet production from east of the Volga at 2500 tanks, 2000 planes and 10,000 trucks per month.

"For artillery the situation is not so good," the article continued.

"Production of this area includes only about 20 per cent of Russia's heavy guns, 30 per cent of her light guns, 20 per cent of her machine guns and 25 per cent of her rifles. It is still worse for munitions. Eighty-five per cent of these were manufactured in regions either occupied already by the Germans or directly threatened by them."

Enormous stocks of munitions were accumulated east of the Volga before the war started, however, and these have not been drawn upon, it was asserted.

Russia has enough shells stored there to last through three months of heavy fighting and enough bullets for six months, the author said.

Anzacs Test New Gun
Canberra, Australia, Nov. 12 (AP). An Australian wartime invention, a mortar-type gun which uses compressed air propulsion instead of ordinary explosives, is being tested by the Australian government.

It is known officially as the "Kirbygun," taking the name of its inventor, who says the absence of flash when the gun fires gives it an important advantage.

The gun is said to be capable of throwing a missile 1200 feet in the air and of handling a variety of missiles.

Rag-Tag, But Proud
Teheran, Iran, Nov. 25 (Delayed) (AP).—Foreign observers said today that Polish troops released by Soviet Russia to fight against the Germans looked like a skinny, rag-tag mob, but marched as proudly as Napoleon's old guards.

In one division only 25 per cent had shirts, 10 per cent had shoes and 5 per cent had coats, they said.

Jackson Urges Law to Oust Crooked Judges

conspiracy charges. Justice Jackson said that "even in the case of Judge Davis, where the man who was supposed to have paid the bribe money pleaded guilty, that jury finds there was no bribe taken."

Senators O'Mahoney (Democrat), of Wyoming; Kilgore (Democrat), of West Virginia, and Danaher (Republican), of Connecticut, each raised the question of constitutionality of the bill. Biddle and three House members, Representatives Summers, Hobbs (Democrat), of Alabama, and Kefauver (Democrat), of Tennessee, all testified that the measure was constitutional.

Justice Jackson's appearance before a Congressional committee was an unusual step for a Supreme Court judge. He said that as Attorney General he had received numerous complaints against Federal judges and that most of these involved bankruptcies and receivership cases with large fees involved for attorneys and large losses for creditors.

He said it was "embarrassing" to ask the Federal Bureau of Investigation to look into these, because word soon spread through a courthouse that "Judge So and So was under suspicion." Sometimes these judges were antagonistic afterward to Justice Department lawyers in all cases, or tried to "court them," Jackson continued.

C. I. O. May Rejoin Defense Mediation Board

volved a C. I. O. union, and vice versa.

The present public members of the board, including Chairman William H. Davis, are understood to be acceptable to the C. I. O. and Murray, even though they were responsible for the coal case decision. Although the C. I. O. members submitted their resignations to President Roosevelt, they have not yet been accepted. Meanwhile, in one case involving a C. I. O. union, the Aluminum Workers of America, union officials met with board representatives Tuesday, despite the fact that the C. I. O. withdrew from board consideration all its pending disputes.

Among these, it is known, are at least six in which the unions stand to gain substantial benefits under continued board procedure. Murray's proposal for a Government-sponsored conference is designed to accomplish, by voluntary agreement, a procedure for preventing defense stoppages, similar to that contemplated in several pending Congressional bills, and presumably including many restrictions on labor's freedom of strike action.

Pending Bills Condemned

The proposal, contained in a letter sent to all C. I. O. affiliates condemning pending antistrike bills as a danger to national defense, apparently contemplated a conference similar to that which in World War I led to the formation of the War Labor Board.

The board functioned under a voluntary agreement entered into by the A. F. of L. representing labor, and the National Industrial Conference Board, representing employers. A set of policies for conciliation and mediation, and an agreement to submit unresolved controversies to arbitration, where a decision would be binding.

In discussing the Murray proposal yesterday before the House Labor Committee, James B. Carey, C. I. O. secretary, implied that "the conference might reach an agreement to submit all disputes to arbitration if other means failed."

In a statement issued later in the day to "correct misinterpretations" placed on his testimony, Carey explained that he did not, and could not, commit the C. I. O. to the acceptance of compulsory arbitration.

He added, however, that voluntary arbitration, in which both sides agree to arbitrate and abide by the resulting decision "is a principle which has long been accepted and practiced by the labor movement."

It was believed yesterday that Administration labor quarters would urge the President to call a conference, presumably with the A. F. of L., C. I. O., and representatives of owners of major defense industries. It was not believed that such a conference, even if a successful set of principles were agreed to, could forestall antistrike legislation. It was thought, however, that it might reduce the pressure for legislation of the more drastic and repressive sort.

On the strike front last night interest centered in word from St. Louis that a general strike of 8500

A. F. of L. machinists which had tied up production on millions of dollars in defense orders in the St. Louis area for the last three days had been settled. Lloyd Weber, business agent of the International Association of Machinists Local, said "the strike is over, that is all I can tell you now," as he emerged from balloting by the executive council on a formula for settlement of the strike. Weber said the machinists would return to work this morning. In the troubled welder situation, the independent union yesterday rejected an OPM "peace plan" under which the A. F. of L. would have granted them a "one-card" system, so that by membership in one A. F. of L. craft they would be enabled to work throughout a defense plant. Previously, the welders had complained of being forced to pay multiple dues and initiation fees.

Seek Independent Recognition

In rejecting the plan, the welders demanded independent recognition, outside both A. F. of L. and C. I. O. In Los Angeles, meanwhile, a local of the new union began a strike vote among the 4800 members in that area.

In New York, the first session of the special arbitration board appointed to consider the union shop demand of the United Mine Workers in captive coal mines adjourned yesterday afternoon, to resume sessions this morning.

Dr. John R. Steelman, on leave as director of conciliation to serve as public member of the board, was named chairman and spokesman.

Other members of the board are Benjamin F. Fairless, president of United States Steel Corporation, representing the employers, and John L. Lewis, president of the United Mine Workers, representing labor.

Price Control Opposition Gains

prise. But an Administration defender, Representative Patman (Democrat), of Texas, declared that to vote against the amendment would be to oppose not only President Roosevelt, but the whole proposition of price control, not to mention National defense and the small business man.

On two issues members on both sides of the House predicted defeat for the President. The opposition was considered most likely to beat down a committee amendment to give the price administrator authority to revoke licenses to sell certain commodities in event that commodity is sold above the ceiling price.

A Republican-sponsored amendment to subject the price administrator's powers to the restraint of review by an administrative board has strong Democratic support. Representative Wolcott, of Michigan, ranking Republican on the Banking Committee and the amendment's author, declared its chances "good."

Representative Cox (Democrat), of Georgia, predicted death for the bill unless Wolcott's amendment is accepted and the licensing provision defeated.

Cox went so far as to tell the House the fight of Representative Gore (Democrat), of Tennessee, for his "overall" inflation control measure spelled defeat for the Administration bill unless that legislation is amended to include some similarly universal check on rising prices.

Gore's bill was offered the House as an amendment to substitute it for the committee bill. His measure was based on inflation-control principles advocated by Bernard M. Baruch, head of the World War Industries Board.

To stem the shift of sentiment against any kind of price legislation, Majority Leader McCormack took the floor late in the afternoon. His speech carried the final knockout punch for the Gore bill, which he declared would produce an "economic straitjacket," but his main attack was reserved for support of the committee.

Soldier Wounded In Canal Zone Has Sisters Here

Private Glenn S. Hubbard, who has two sisters living here, was in critical condition at Gorgas Hospital in the Panama Canal Zone last night after accidentally shooting himself in the stomach with an Army rifle, the United Press reported.

Hubbard is the brother of Mrs. Jerry Derocco, 1856 Ingleside Terrace Northwest, and Miss Marion Hubbard, 4325 Iowa Avenue Northwest. Miss Hubbard is employed in the Public Health Service.

Hubbard is a member of the Army garrison of Taboguilla Island, lying near the Pacific entrance to the Panama Canal. His home is in Carthage, Mo.

Race on Labor Bills Develops

nightfall had become so complex that veteran legislators predicted the final form of any legislation adopted must await a conference settlement.

The Ball bill, original "cooling off" measure modeled after the "waiting period" State plan of Gov. Stassen of Minnesota, was made the special order of business of the Senate Labor Subcommittee today. The subcommittee will consider a substitute drafted by the author, Senator Ball (Republican), of Minnesota.

The subcommittee meanwhile set hearings tomorrow on a bill by Senator Herring (Democrat), of Iowa, providing cooling off, a secret ballot before strikes can be ordered, and in effect freezing closed and open shop conditions in defense industries. Herring and OPM Director Knudsen will testify on the bill.

Hill said hearings later will be held on the bill by Senator Bridges (Republican), of New Hampshire, to "democratize" labor unions and require the secret strike ballot. The Senate whip predicted "there will be a Senate Labor Committee bill" but would not specify what form it would take.

Hearings on Ramspeck Bill

Across the plaza, the House Labor Committee held executive hearings on the tentative Ramspeck bill, with James B. Carey, executive secretary of the C. I. O., opposing any legislative restrictions. Instead, Carey urged agreement by labor, Government and industry, at a conference called by the President, to keep defense production going "without sacrificing the basic rights."

William Green, president of the A. F. of L., will appear before the House committee today to state his opposition to "projected antilabor legislation of any sort."

The House committee tomorrow will vote on the Ramspeck cooling-off and compulsory arbitration measure, carrying House leadership support and presumably White House assent as well. There were indications compulsory arbitration features will be tempered, if not eliminated.

Whip hand in determining priority for House labor bills on the floor was still held by the conservative Rules Committee. That committee already has reported a rule for the Vinson bill, which has since been revised so that it conforms in most major details with the projected Ramspeck draft. One influential member of the Rules Committee, who favors stronger legislation suggested the committee may meet later this week to reconsider or revamp the rule already granted.

As tentatively drafted, the Ramspeck bill reconstitutes the National Mediation Board under the executive office, with up to a 30-day "cooling off" authority, and power to proceed with a public panel if labor members walk out. If negotiation, conciliation and mediation fail, the President could appoint an emergency board to arbitrate the strike. Workers refusing to comply with the board's settlement would be deprived of their privileges under the Labor Relations Act, the Norris-LaGuardia Anti-injunction Act, and Government bounties. Plants of employers who refused to accept arbitration could be seized.

Orphaned by Unions, Welders Threaten Strike

Rebellion Could Damage Work in Defense Industries

By Ben Gilbert
Post Staff Writer

The country was faced last night with possible mushrooming strikes of thousands of welders throughout the country who are dissatisfied with Government efforts to solve the problem growing out of the refusal of the A. F. of L. and C. I. O. to grant them independent recognition, it was learned last night.

The welders are trying to free themselves of a situation which now often compels them to take out union cards and pay dues in a number of unions to assure themselves steady work.

These strikes, which may break out anywhere in the United States where welders are now working side by side with skilled A. F. of L. craftsmen, or C. I. O. industrial unionists, could damage the defense program out of all proportion to the number of men involved because of the key nature of work performed by welders in hundreds of defense plants.

Serve Notice on Hillman

The welders, who have been pounding at Government doors for more than two weeks to secure official recognition, last night served notice on Sidney Hillman, associate director-general of the Office of Production Management and head of its labor division, that nothing less than an NLRB election covering the entire country to determine whether welders should be represented by the A. F. of L., the C. I. O., or an independent welding union "of their own choosing," would satisfy them.

The demand for the election is without precedent in the history of collective bargaining and reveals their determination to secure "decisive action" pointing toward "immediate recognition."

Failure to secure "satisfaction" from Hillman is expected to result in a direct appeal by the welders to the President over Hillman's head. Failure there may well unleash the pent-up anger of the skilled craftsmen, who have been kicked around by branches of organized labor, resulting in strikes everywhere.

Presentation of their case to investigators of the Truman National Defense Investigating Committee is also planned.

Failed to Get Recognition

The welders are restless because they have failed to obtain recognition as a separate craft or skill from defense authorities.

No welding union or craft is recognized as such by either group. This dual and triple unionism requires the welders to plank down dues and initiation fees to several organizations, even though they can only work in one craft at a time. The Washington Post was shown an accumulation of records and photographs which showed that welders in different parts of the country had paid high union fees to more than one union at the same time as a type of insurance guaranteeing them steady work.

The welders' case is being presented here by a committee of national independent welding union officials who banded together on November 18 under the name of United Brotherhood of Welders, Cutters and Helpers of America. The group claims to represent 75,000 welders already enrolled in independent welding unions.

Nucleus of Committee

Independent welding unions have sprung up throughout the country, the largest being the United Welders, Cutters and Helpers, which is forming the nucleus of the committee.

The committee, according to Karl V. Morris, president of the united group from Los Angeles, is preparing to call a national convention of all welding unions within 60 days to put the committee organization on a firm foundation.

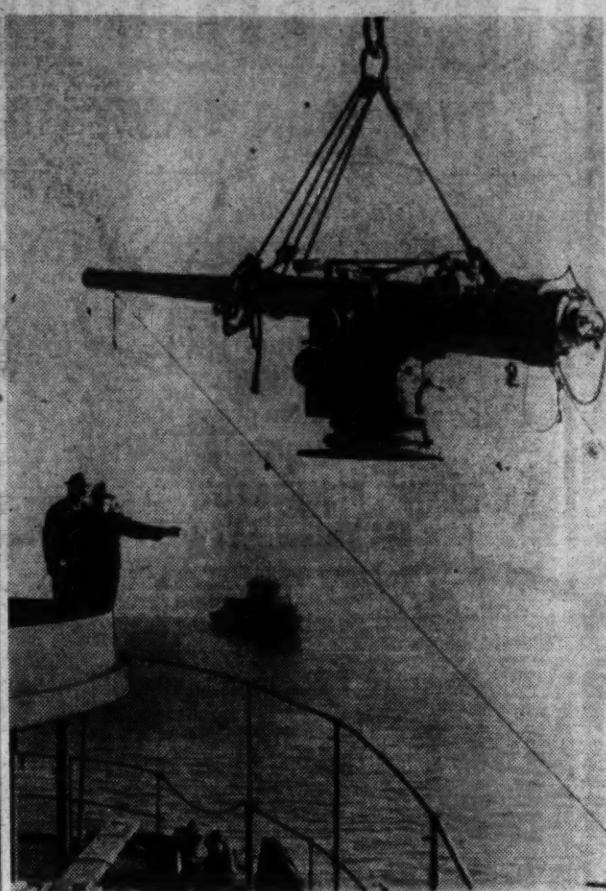

Plans for recognition as an independent affiliated union have been turned down by the two major unions as recently as the A. F. of L. convention in Seattle last month. The C. I. O. set-up which does not provide for the organization of specific crafts has blocked the welders there.

A recent statement from the group said the welders were complaining against "a super government which has set itself up in this country and maintains a trust monopoly far more sinister in purpose than any the Sherman Act was ever invoked to control."

Call It a Racket

The officials here contend that the dual and triple union card set-up is just a "racket" with the welder the victim. They state that welding is an independent skill which does not change when a welder works on a ship, or a steel structure for a building, or a bridge. They estimate that welders pay $27,000,000 a year to the A. F. of L. in dues.

The group presented its problem to Hillman earlier this month and Hillman secured an agreement from A. F. of L. mechanical trades unions that only one card would be required for welding work in shipyards, centers of many disputes and strikes. The agreement reached November 5 provided that all striking welders were to be returned to work and permitted to operate with only one craft card.

Now the welders state the agreement has proved worthless because it has been violated by A. F. of L. crafts throughout the country, which have left OPM standing by with no power to enforce its edicts. Furthermore, they point out that the agreement covered nothing but shipbuilding and has not affected regulations in building trades and other crafts.

Neither C. I. O. Nor A. F. of L. Writing to Hillman yesterday, the welders asserted that they do not choose to be represented by the American Federation of Labor nor the Congress of Industrial Organizations. This represents a change from a previous position, when members of the group expressed a willingness to affiliate with the A. F. of L. if it secured recognition as a separate division of the mechanical trades department.

"Unless the Office of Production Management in prepared and willing and able to secure these rights to the welders of this country, that office is incapable of assisting in any way in the solution of the problem that is now facing American industry and the Government itself," the letter stated.

First place where a strike is likely to flare if the welding dispute is not settled soon is Los Angeles. There, 4800 members of the United Welders were taking a strike vote last night which would affect vital shipbuilding activities in the area. The strike vote was an answer to a threat by E. V. Blackwell, business agent of the A. F. of L. Boilermakers Union, that welders who had not been reinstated in good standing in the boilermakers group would be removed from their jobs. Officials here displayed a number of telegraphic summonses to Los Angeles welders from Blackwell ordering them to appear before the boilermakers' executive board to explain why they answered a previous United Welders strike call. A telegram from a Florence (Ala.) welding official to the group here recounted that out of 75 members of the independent union, eight held three other cards, 33 held two others, six held C. I. O. cards in addition to their independent cards, and 34 also belonged to one A. F. of L. craft.

Danish Police Fire on Crowd In All-Day Anti-Nazi Riots

By the Associated Press

Stockholm (Thursday), Nov. 27.—The Stockholm paper Dagens Nyheter reported today that police fired into crowds and used their maces in trying to break up repeated demonstrations in Copenhagen yesterday against German-occupied Denmark's adherence to the anti-Comintern pact.

The paper said hundreds of Danish students gathered in front of the royal palace in Amalienborg Place, singing the national anthem and crying out against Foreign Minister Eric Scavenius, who signed the pact.

Police dispersed them and arrested their leader, the account continued, but they then marched to the offices of the Nazi paper, Fæderlandet, the Riksdag and the foreign office to demonstrate anew, shouting, "Down with Scavenius the traitor."

Police battered many heads and arrested 40 persons in breaking up a crowd in the great Square of Rådhuspladsen and finally fired into new throngs who renewed the uproar last night, the report said.

Windows in many Nazi localities were smashed.

Papers in Denmark did not mention the disorders, Dagens Nyheter reported.

Woman, 53, Is 85th Victim Of D. C. Traffic

D. C. traffic deaths this year... 85
Deaths this date last year... 85
District total last year... 79

A coroner's jury at noon today will investigate the traffic death of Miss Mary Belle Davidson, 53, of 2891 Sixteenth Street Northwest, an examiner at the United States Patent Office.

Miss Davidson was killed at Sixteenth and Fuller Streets Northwest at 8 a. m. yesterday when she was hurled some 35 feet by a south-bound Capital Transit Co. bus.

A passenger on the bus suffered a fractured ankle when she was thrown to the floor by the sudden stop.

According to police, Miss Davidson was crossing Sixteenth Street in the crosswalk when struck by the heavy vehicle. The driver of the bus, Charles J. Mike, 34, of 1813 Adams Mill Road Northwest, told police he did not see the woman until she was directly in the path of the bus.

One witness said Miss Davidson was running and another said she was walking.

The injured bus passenger, Mrs. Flora Crozier, 43, of 1650 Harvard Street Northwest, was admitted to Emergency Hospital with a fractured left ankle and cut.

Miss Davidson was Washington's eighty-fifth traffic fatality of the year. Born in Nashville, Tenn., she was graduated with an A. B. degree from Vanderbilt University and later received an L. L. B. degree from the National University here.

In 1918 she came to Washington to work in the Patent Office as an examiner. Since that time she had been employed in the same department. She was a member of the Calvary Baptist Church.

Miss Davidson leaves two sisters, Mrs. R. T. Davis, Arlington, Va., and Mrs. J. C. Cannon, of Nashville, Tenn., and one brother, H. A. Davidson, of the same city. The funeral will be held today at 1 p. m. from the Nevius funeral home, 1200 N Street Northwest. Burial will be in the family plot in Nashville, Tenn.

Circus Fans, Take Note...

"ADVANCE NOTICE"—Members of the Shrine circus committee met last night at the National Press Club to make ready for the big show at Uline Arena in February. Giving their approval to an advance poster are (from left) Howard W. Foley, general chairman of the committee; Dr. William Mann, Zoo director, member of the committee's advisory board; and Earl Whittier Shinn, potentate of the Shrine.

Hey, fellows! There are a lot of elephants and clowns and mgs on flying trapezes coming here in February.

Some men got together last night at the National Press Club, you see, and before they were through talking they had decided to bring "some of the biggest circus acts in the United States" here for the Shrine circus.

The men were of the Shrine circus committee and this was the kick-off meeting for the circus. At the circus, the men said, they are going to entertain free thousands of underprivileged children.

When these men say entertain, fellows, they mean entertain: free tickets, free popcorn, free pop, free peanuts to feed the elephants.

They figure on entertaining about 25,000 underprivileged children, more if necessary, February 9 to 15 at Uline's Arena.

About $12,000 will be spent in bringing big stars here from all the top circuses, they said. That will bring in a lot of elephants, clowns, st cetera, you can believe.

The men at the meeting included Howard P. Foley, general chairman of the circus; Earl Whittier Shinn, potentate of Almas Temple; Lloyd Gainer, chairman of the "Miss Personality" contest committee; Jim Councillor, chairman of the publicity and promotion committee; and Dr. William M. Mann, director of the Zoo and member of the advisory committee.

Nellie Custis School To Present Operetta

Pupils of the Nellie Custis Elementary School in Arlington, Va., will present an operetta entitled "The Fairy Shoemaker," Friday. The play will be given at 8 p. m. in the Mechanics Educational Building, Twenty-Third and Grand Streets South, Arlington, Va., and Miss Mary Supinger and Miss Louise Copenhagen are supervising the production.

D. C. Men Meet Hungry Lion; Go to Lunch

Advancing quarter-inch by quarter-inch, two Washingtonians yesterday drew in their breaths, shut their eyes for a moment, and then stepped up to a huge 450-pound meat-eating lion. It was noon—almost lunch time. The scene was Post Square in front of the District Building.

Kink Tarz, the lion, licked his lips deliciously, switched his yard-long tail and snuffed.

However, Tarz had most friendly intentions and seemed willing to chat with the two men. He gave a growl of friendship as J. Clifford Folger, the Community Chest's campaign chairman, and "Ted" Neal, chairman of the Group Solicitation Unit, uttered a throaty:

"Hello."

The lion turned his head toward the visitors, but a gentle tap on the mouth from his attendant, "Capt." Bob Matthews, brought him back into position.

Save for shaking his handsome black mane, Tarz was indifferent to the rest of the proceedings. Perhaps his mind was on lunch. Say about 18 pounds of steak and a gallon of water.

Occasion of the visit was an agreement among the Community Chest leaders that the chairman of the unit collecting the least money in a day's period, would have to enter the lion's cage. Ted Neal "won."

He's Quite, Quite Tame

Tarz, 10 years old, and a famous movie lion, is tame—as tame as a lion can be.

When the brief visit was over, the two Community Chest leaders stepped out of the cage, yawned, and smiled at one another.

"Well, let's get some lunch," Ted Neal said.

States, who said yesterday that he was "very much impressed with the value of the community's effort and the devoted work being done by the Chest."

"I am extremely sympathetic with your aspirations, and I hope you reach your goal," he told Chairman Folger.

At Tuesday's report meeting, pledges totaling $1,238,791.54 or 61.45 per cent of goal were reported. Chest leaders think it improbable that the balance of the quota will be reported at today's meeting.

However, from the steady parade of Government unit keymen to Community Chest headquarters yesterday, and from the ever-mounting pile of solicitors' report envelopes bulging with pledge cards and cash, leaders hope that today's meeting may witness the greatest outpouring of contributions yet recorded in one day.

In another part of the city yesterday, last year's Community Chest funds were being put to good use.

A Negro family, their home destroyed by fire Friday night, was being cared for by the Family Service Association, one of 59 Chest-supported agencies.

Two children, critically burned, are in Children's Hospital, and the rest of the family have been temporarily housed while the Chest agency prepared to obtain furniture and another apartment for them.

The Chest agency also is attempting to get the father a better job. He earns $11 per week.

Steinhardt Reaches Capital, Won't Talk

Laurence A. Steinhardt, United States Ambassador to Russia, arrived in the Capital late yesterday after a 15,000-mile airplane journey home, with his lip "bulged-up" until he has seen "the boss."

"The boss" is President Roosevelt, to whom the Ambassador, to the Soviets is expected to report today on the progress of the Nazi-Russian war, and Russia's needs of American war material aid. Steinhardt will first confer with his immediate superior, Secretary of State Hull.

The drink that made useful moments out of idle minutes

The hands that rule the world are on the face of the clock. Measure life how you will... you still can live it only one minute at a time. Busy minutes of work... happy minutes of play... sociable minutes... minutes alone... minutes of rest... Somewhere each day there will come to you a minute or two in which you will pause. This advertisement will tell you how you can make such a minute a pleasant, useful moment in your—or anybody's—busy life.

A pause is part of the pulse of life. So, the need to pause must come to everyone. No matter who you are, where you are, or what you do, you will pause in your activities several times today. Something else will happen. You, like millions of others, will get thirsty. Because of these facts, an idea has become a nation-wide industry.

It worked out like this:—take a pause plus thirst and add ice-cold Coca-Cola and you have the pause that refreshes. This "delicious and refreshing" drink adds to relaxation what relaxation always needs... pure, wholesome refreshment. Thus everywhere ice-cold Coca-Cola is doing an everyday job of good for every walk of life.

Coca-Cola had to be good to get where it is. People found that Coca-Cola is truly what it promised to be—"delicious and refreshing," with the quality of genuine goodness.

Into the story of this drink has gone time, work and far-seeing direction. When you raise ice-cold Coca-Cola to your lips, in that one moment hangs the fruit of many years.

Roosevelt Favorite On Arabs' Radios

Missionary Back From Desert Tells Of Modern Iraq

Picture, if you can, of a group of tunic-clad Bedouin tribesmen sitting in their goat-hair tent on an Iraq desert sipping freshly mashed coffee and listening to a Roosevelt fireside chat coming in over an American battery radio.

There, whatever the movies may say, you have one glimpse of Arabian life today, brought here yesterday by Dr. John Van Ess, an educational missionary in Iraq for nearly two-score years.

Roosevelt is a favorite with the Arabs, says Dr. Van Ess. After the fireside chat is over, they are likely to turn to a discussion of collective bargaining or some other phase of the New Deal, while outside their camels snore away or whatever it is camels do when they sleep.

May Be War Theater

Sitting last night in the home of his sister-in-law, Mrs. Lennie Sweet, Fairfax, Va., Dr. Van Ess was a colorful sight—a tall, tanned man with closely-cropped hair, moving long, artistic fingers in soft gestures.

Thirty-nine years ago he turned down a teaching job at Princeton University, which he attended to go among the Arabs as a Dutch Reformed Church educational missionary. He went to learn the languages. He liked the land well enough to stay. He was last there in September.

Outside of the fact that the present Iraq housed the original Garden of Eden, everyone should be interested in it anyway, Dr. Van Ess explained, because it is entirely possible the war may move vigorously into this sector. This is because Iraq has vast economic resources—fertile in soil and rich in war-valuable minerals that lie under the soil.

While the Germans bribe Nationalist leaders "up to the eyelids," the British continue to play "the rhetorical cricket" in Iraq, Dr. Van Ess said.

Majority Pro-British

"The great majority of the people are pro-British," he said. "But the Axis has handed out money by the shovelful to certain leaders in Iraq. These leaders have stirred up some unrest."

"Against this German rascality, this bribery, the British continue to play the rules of the game. I am not recommending bribery to the British but I think they should play a little stiffer hand against the connivings of the Axis."

Dr. Van Ess says the masses of the people of Iraq are pro-British. This is the statement of a man who established the first Arabic school in Iraq—something he did under a direct order from Sultan Abdul Hamid of Turkey, which then controlled the land, known at that time as Mesopotamia.

"They want to keep their independence, of course," he said, "but they prefer the British to the Germans for the simple reason they know from experience the British are fair while they can see the Germans aren't." More than three-fourths of the people of Iraq are Arabs.

Americans Ace High

In spite of the German money handouts, the British have the situation in Iraq well in hand, said Dr. Van Ess.

All Americans, he said, are ace high in Iraq, mainly because of American philanthropies there. Everyone there, he said, knows who Roosevelt and Cordell Hull are and the social aspects of the New Deal constitute a popular after-dinner subject among the Arab tribesmen. The American President's speeches are heard in Arabic, broadcast from London.

Dr. Van Ess delivered an address here this week in the Near East Lecture Series.

Retail food prices continued to rise during the first half of November, according to a check on eighteen staple foods in nineteen cities, Miss Frances Perkins, Secretary of Labor, reported yesterday.

The rise in egg prices continued in almost all cities, the average advance amounting to about 2 cents per dozen. Fractional advances in coffee prices were reported in eighteen of the nineteen cities, with an average rise of about one-half cent per pound.

Prices of round steak, pork chops, bacon, and roasting chickens declined moderately in many cities, while increases and decreases offset each other in the case of chuck roast.

In the New York area the price of cabbage increased by 18.4 per cent. Next were oranges 9.9 per cent, eggs 3 per cent; lard, 2.3 per cent; coffee 1.1 per cent. Bean prices remained the same while the cost of sugar decreased by 4 per cent.

Berlin Is 'Sad'

Chilean Tells Of Hidden Air Damage

Copyright by New York Times.
New York, Nov. 26.—Although scaffolding erected around damaged buildings in Berlin immediately after bombardment by British aircraft hides the exact extent of Britain's aerial offensive against the German capital, "there is a great deal of it," declared Lieut. Comdr. Eugene Cibie, of the Chilean navy, who arrived here aboard Pan American Airways' Dixie Clipper yesterday.

Commander Cibie said that he was returning from Denmark where he had been on a "special mission" for two years and that on his way here he had spent one day and two nights in Berlin.

He said that "the Germans seem very sad—you never see a smiling face," adding that in Denmark reports are circulating that the "Norwegians are close to starvation." Asked how long he thought Sweden could remain neutral, he replied, "What do you mean by neutral?" and departed.

Previous to his remarks about the scaffolding in Berlin, his wife, Blanca, said that Commander Cibie had been in command of a Chilean warship that was being held in Germany. She could give no reason for the ship's internment and ended the interview. But the officer himself denied he had a ship in European waters and asserted he had been on a "special mission."

Russell J. Barnes, Detroit News correspondent in London, said the air situation was "quite well in hand," with the British bombardment of the city continuing. He said that the British had achieved parity in both quantity and quality with the Germans, but they have not yet achieved superiority.

As a result of American production, providing ship replacements, the Battle of the Atlantic is also "well in hand," and sunken ships are replaced in equal numbers, he continued.

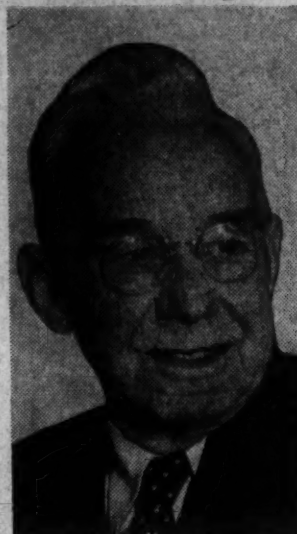

Barnes added that during a brief stay in Lisbon he heard rumors of a great influx of German "tourists," but had been unable to verify that.

Duchess Rebuked In Commons for Gem-Wearing Here

London, Nov. 26 (P).—The recent visit of the Duke and Duchess of Windsor to the United States was criticized in the House of Commons by Laborite Alexander Sloan yesterday, who asked:

"Is the undersecretary aware of the bitter comment being made in United States newspapers regarding this visit, more especially with regard to the ostentatious display of jewelry and finery at a period when people of this country are strictly rationed, and it so will make representations to the Prime Minister to have this gentleman and his wife recalled?"

Amnesia Victim, 67, Recognizes Old Friend, But 11-Year Mental Void Still Remains Puzzle

MARTIN P. GRAVEN
Stephenson Remembered Him

Stephenson's Former Associate to Seek Solution of Mystery

By Gerald G. Gross

Post Staff Writer

"Hello Mr. Stephenson, do you remember me?"

"Of course, Mr. Graven. How have you been?"

Those prosaic words climaxed the latest chapter Tuesday in the strange case of William Michael Stephenson, amnesia victim extraordinary.

Those words, too, marked a forward step toward the main climax, which will come—perhaps next week, perhaps in 1945, perhaps never—when the 67-year-old central character remembers what happened to him between the years 1922 and 1933.

Martin P. Graven, of 2108 Bancroft Place Northwest, was brought into Stephenson's presence yesterday at the District Home for the Aged, which has been his home since July 1933. The two men had not seen each other since 1909.

Stephenson had not been told who his visitor would be. Yet he recognized Graven instantly. Baffling amnesia case that he is, he had no difficulty placing the visitor as the man who had been his friend more than three decades ago in St. Paul where Stephenson was general agent for the Soo Line and Graven was motor freight agent for the Milwaukee Road.

A novel sidelight of the reunion is that Graven is the father of Dr. Philip Graven, who was one of the first psychiatrists called into consultation on the Stephenson case after the white-haired, puzzled man walked "to police headquarters on an April day in 1933 and announced he was 'lost.'"

It was through his son that the elder Graven learned of Stephenson's residence at the Blue Plains institution. Yesterday, after long delay, he went out to see if this amnesia victim and the man he had known back in St. Paul were one and the same.

WILLIAM MICHAEL STEPHENSON
Amnesia Victim Extraordinary

When Stephenson first came to the attention of Washington authorities 8½ years ago, all he could remember was: His first name was William, he thought; he had a wife and six children in Ohio; he had once sold banking equipment for a Cleveland firm.

Principally by hypnosis, Dr. Graven and Dr. Karl H. Langenstrass, of St. Elizabeths Hospital, learned the man's full name and more about his history. As the years went by, many things came back spontaneously to the portly, quiet-mannered Stephenson.

It was true that he had a wife and family in Ohio, but they never came for him.

To this day Stephenson has been unable to remember anything that occurred between August 22, 1922, and the day he trudged to police headquarters here. The last thing he recalls, before the "blind spot" began, is leaving his home to keep an appointment. He suspects that he neither kept the appointment nor returned home.

With no indication that Stephenson's family will lift the curtain on that time lapse of nearly 11 years, Graven said yesterday that he is going to do all he can to solve the mystery.

Now retired from railroading, he plans to communicate with those men still living who were mutual friends of his and Stephenson's in St. Paul in the hope one of them may know something of the latter's post-1922 years.

"We visited together for more than an hour," said Graven last night. "He mentioned the names of many railroad men we both knew in St. Paul. He wants desperately to find out what he did, where he was between 1922 and 1933. His fear is that something may have happened during that period which is responsible for his family's failure to claim him."

Jews Must Sell Paris Buildings

Copyright by New York Times.
Vichy, Nov. 26.—It is announced in Paris that beginning December 1, buildings in the city owned by Jews will be offered for sale "under the terms of the law of July 22, 1941."

In order "to eliminate all Jewish influence from national economy" this law enabled the commissioner-general for Jewish questions to appoint—"provisional—managers"—to take charge of business or buildings belonging to Jews. It also empowered these managers to "dispose" of these possessions. Hence the coming sales.

The Paris newspapers print the detailed conditions which include private bids in sealed envelopes and proof that the purchaser is Aryan.

Murders Increase 7.9 Per Cent

A 7.9 percent increase in murders in the United States was revealed yesterday by the third quarterly Uniform Crime Reports Bulletin of the Department of Justice, which disclosed substantial increases in many types of crimes during the first nine months of this year, as compared with the same period for 1940.

Rapes increased 7.2 per cent; automobile thefts, 6.6 per cent; felonious assaults, 5.5 per cent, and negligent manslaughters, which consist largely of traffic fatalities in which gross criminal negligence occurred, jumped 15 per cent.

Some forms of crime showed a downward trend, Director J. Edgar Hoover pointed out. These include a 7.7 per cent drop in robberies; 6.1 per cent in burglaries and 1 per cent in larcenies. However the figures showed that 59 per cent of the crimes reported to the FBI by police agencies were larcenies; 21 per cent burglaries, more than half of these involving stores, warehouses houses office buildings and other nonresidential structures. The FBI studied 479,701 fingerprint arrest records during the nine months which revealed a 15 per cent increase in the arrest of women. The report showed that women arrested for auto theft, driving while intoxicated, and disorderly conduct increased 24.3 per cent, 28.3 per cent and 31.3 per cent, respectively.

How Tank Gunners Learn to Shoot

By Stephen J. McDonough
Associated Press Staff Writer

Fort Knox, Ky., Nov. 26.—The Minute Men of 1776 produced a race of split-second marksmen.

But where great-great-grandpa made his own gunpowder and bullets and slowly loaded for a single shot, his great-great-grandson is snapping them out at 300 per minute, and getting much greater accuracy.

It was comparatively easy for grandpa to hide behind a tree to charge his muzzle loader and take careful aim at his enemy. It is quite another for today's soldier to sit in a pitching, rolling, yawing tank and get a bead on a target. But the men being trained in the armored force school here are doing it.

The training method sounds silly unless you should happen to be on the receiving end of a cannon or machine gun after these marksmen have been taught for a month. British troops have been trained to shoot with BB guns but the United States Army doesn't consider them accurate enough and there aren't enough to go around. Instead, the soldier of 1942 is learning to shoot with a beam of light.

The shooting gallery looks like the pinball games in drug stores, pool halls and hotel lobbies with one big difference. The soldier is handed a model of a Thompson submachine gun or Garand rifle which is wired to the game machine. The weapon shoots bits of light aimed at targets of men, tanks and trucks which speed across the illuminated front of the machine.

JUMPY WORK—Men of the Army's armored force at Fort Knox learn to aim 37-mm. tank guns by firing them from "wobble-plates," which simulate the movement of tanks at varied speeds.

Behind each target is a photo-electric cell, a vacuum tube which converts light into energy, and each hit is recorded electrically on the soldier's scoreboard. It sounds like fun, and it must be because men keep turning up on their time off to do a little practice shooting.

However, it's deadly practice. The recruit's next step in firing, if his score is high enough, is on an indoor range, where he fires .22-caliber shells (this should be a comfort to the taxpayer) instead of full-size 37-millimeter shells at moving targets. The .22 caliber shell cost about 5 cents, the 37-millimeter shell more than $5.

As soon as he gets so good he is knocking over four targets out of five, he is promoted to trouble. Instead of standing on solid ground he is put on a platform which twists, turns, jumps and pitches like a galloping mule in an earthquake. And if he can't hit the moving targets four times out of 10 he is not considered a gunner.

But the platform test in firing is just a pleasant social introduction to his third and final test—the actual firing of 37-millimeter shells from a roaring tank going at 20 miles an hour across the ditches and hills of this rolling Kentucky country.

First Duiker Born at Zoo

Mother and keepers alike took pride in exhibiting a baby duiker at the Zoo yesterday.

Mrs. Duiker strutted. And the keepers of the small mammal house were no less elated, because it was the first duiker ever born in Washington and probably the first in the United States.

The animal—its name is pronounced to rhyme with hiker—is one of the tiniest species of antelopes, standing no taller than an average sized dog. Its native habitat is West Africa.

The mother is one of several captured last year in Liberia by the Smithsonian-Firestone expedition, led by Dr. William M. Mann, director of National Zoological Park.

Mother Duiker's only regret, one of the keepers meditated yesterday, might be that the baby came into the world without a daddy. Daddy died last week.

MRS. DIUKER'S PRIDE AND JOY IS NEWEST ZOOCOMER

Loveless Coupe Found in Cumberland, Ky.; Two Youthful Suspects Flee Police

Loudoun County, identified the elder of the two youths as a former farm hand on the Loveless estate who had been fired five weeks before.

Described as "Sullen"

He said the 18-year-old former employe had been dismissed because he was "worthless, sullen, and mean."

The youth, described by Honican as being blond haired, then went to work for a nearby tree surgeon, the Loveless farm manager said.

It was learned that the two youths told the aunt of one, whom they visited in Cumberland, that the car had been given to them by the late's father. The aunt, however, became suspicious of the story, and notified the Cumberland police.

Suspects Flee

But by the time the police reached the house to question the youths, they had disappeared. It was believed they fled by foot, and had gone into hiding into the rugged West Virginia hill country.

Both youths were described as being tall and of slender build. One had a scar over the right temple and wore blue overalls.

One was wearing a hat and the other was bareheaded.

This led to the speculation that the dilapidated, brown felt hat found in the Loudoun County farmhouse, where Loveless was killed after a furious struggle, might have been left behind by the hapless youth.

Found in Dining Room

The battered hat was discovered in the dining room of the Loveless home; and outside on the lawn was found Loveless' hat. From these two details investigators theorized that the slayer of the lawyer-squire grabbed the wrong hat in running from the house after the murder, and threw it away on discovering his error.

The strange hat, however, bore the initials "A. T." on the inside band, and, according to Cumberland police, neither of the two youths' names began with those letters. On the other hand, if the two youths are the killers of Loveless, police theorized, then robbery was probably the motive for the murder. Therefore it was reasoned they could have stolen the hat.

The "A. T." hat is still considered highly important evidence. Dr. Richard Rosenberg, District deputy coroner, yesterday examined the hat in his criminological laboratory.

Blond Hairs Found

The examination of hairs found in the hat revealed that it had been worn by a blond youth, whose hair was closely cut.

Did the strands of hair from the hat match the hair of one of the youths?

That is what Loudoun County authorities wanted to know as they rushed to Cumberland, a mining town of 5000, to inspect the abandoned coupe.

Discovery of the missing coupe in Kentucky permitted the entry of the Federal Bureau of Investigation into the case. Virginia officials early in the case had called for FBI aid in solving Loudoun County's most bizarre crime in a decade, but until the stolen auto crossed State lines, the Federal agents could not join the investigation.

Virginia authorities yesterday brought to Washington the fingerprints of all those who might have touched anything in the Loveless manor house Monday morning, including those of Will Davis, the Negro handyman, who discovered Loveless' body stuffed into a china closet.

Loveless' own fingerprints had been mailed here the day before.

Important Fingerprints Found

As a result of checking all the fingerprints, it is now known that the investigators have in their possession prints of persons who almost certainly were the killers.

These include prints that were found on a table in the Loveless dining room, on glasses, and on a tomato jar. One set of prints belonged to a woman.

The background on the Loveless murder follows:

Ward Loveless, the victim, was 51 years old. He was 5 feet 11 inches in height and weighed about 180 pounds. A Mississippi farm boy who made good, he was a tax attorney in Washington and lived on a 200-acre farm, Waverly, 7 miles northwest of Leesburg. He carried life insurance of $100,000 and owned property valued at $500,000. Much of this property, however, carried mortgages.

Mrs. Irene Loveless, wife of the slain man, was visiting his relatives in Alabama at the time of the murder.

Last Sunday morning Loveless drove into Washington to meet Miss Nora Macon and Miss Mary Heath. He took them to the farm, where they had a few drinks. Loveless offered them a drink out of a bottle of Mexican tequila, but the girls didn't like it.

Eight-Hour Gap

Later Sunday, about 6:30 p. m., Loveless and Miss Macon and Miss Heath drove into Washington and called on Lawrence Richey, former secretary to Herbert Hoover, at his apartment in the Somerset on Sixteenth Street. Miss Heath, a friend of Richey, arranged this call by telephone. It was Richey's first meeting with Loveless, whom he described later as a "nice chap."

The quartet went to the Columbia Country Club for dinner as guests of Loveless, a member of the club. They left there about 10:30 o'clock. Loveless took the others home, and started for his estate. Miss Macon said she last saw him about midnight Sunday.

Loveless' farm is about 40 miles from Washington, so that he ought to have arrived there at about 1 a. m. Monday.

It is the interval between Sunday midnight, when Loveless left Washington, and 9 a. m. Monday, when Loveless' body was found, that the Virginia authorities are trying to fill in. At 8 a. m. Monday, Will Davis, Loveless' houseman, who lived away from the farm, found Loveless' body, fully clothed even to an overcoat, in a china closet off the dining room.

Shot Four Times, Besten

Loveless had been battered over the head and had been shot four times. Three other shots missed him. No guns were found by investigators, but examination of the bullets showed that two weapons were used—a .22-caliber revolver and a .35-caliber automatic.

There was blood on the stairway leading from the first-floor hallway. On the steps, too, was found a silver dish, which apparently was used as a bludgeon or a missile. The dining room and the adjoining breakfast room showed signs of a furious struggle. The telephone wires in the house had been cut.

what is regarded as the major clue in the case—an old felt hat with the initials A. T. on the inner band. The hat bore the label of a New York City shop.

This hat was left in the dining room. The killer took a hat belonging to Loveless, but threw it away on the lawn. Apparently he discovered his mistake there, but was afraid to go back into the house.

Pistols Missing

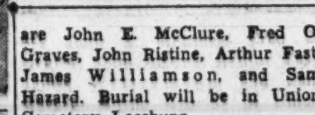

The killers stole one of Loveless' two automobiles, a green Ford coupe with Virginia tags 300-364.

Among the articles that were missing after the murder was discovered were Loveless' wallet, a gold watch which his father had given him when he was 17, a .32 caliber revolver left in the farm house by Lieut. Albert Carr, Loveless' son-in-law, who is attached to Edgewood Arsenal, and a pair of old muzzle-loading dueling pistols.

Washington police have contended from the outset that robbery was the motive for the killing, but Virginia authorities leaned toward the theory that the killers were motivated by jealousy or revenge.

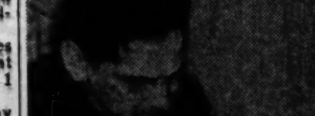

Barriers Lodge, No. 48, of Masons, will hold special services for Loveless at Waverly at 2:30 p. m. today. Masonic brothers of Loveless will serve as pallbearers. They

The body has been resting in the Lloyd Slack funeral home, one of the two oldest buildings in Leesburg. The structure was occupied by Lafayette in 1823, when it served as an inn on the old Post Road from Alexandria.

Mrs. Carroll, who is the sister of one of the youth's father, said there are several other children in her brother's family. Her brother, she said, is a railroad worker.

Dr. Phillips Installed As Cathedral Dean

1500 at Service as Chaplain of Senate Becomes Bishop's Vicar for Administration

By Robert Tate Allen

With his right hand upon the Bible, the Very Rev. ZeBarney Thorne Phillips, D. D., LL. D., S. T. D., yesterday pledged renewed fealty to the Christian cause, as he was installed as dean of Washington Cathedral in simple rites.

More than 1500 worshippers, headed by Vice President and Mrs. Henry A. Wallace, listened from many points of the vast edifice as Dean Phillips stood at the chancel steps, gale and, holding the program of the installation ceremony in his left hand, said:

"I will spare no effort to make this cathedral church a house of prayer for all people, forever free and open, welcoming all who enter its doors to hear the glad tidings of the Kingdom of Heaven and to worship God in spirit and in truth."

Receives Bishop's Charge

Dr. Theodore O. Wedel, Cathedral Canon Chancellor, who was holding the Bible for Dean Phillips, withdrew to one side as leaders of the Cathedral Chapter arose from their seats in the Great Choir and stepped to the aisle. There they joined the Right Rev. James E. Freeman, Bishop of Washington, the Very Rev. Noble C. Powell, Bishop Coadjutor of Maryland and former Dean of Washington, and Canon Anson Phelps Stokes, retired Canon of the Cathedral, in escorting Dean Phillips to his stall at the rood screen entrance to the Great Choir.

"I charge you, as the bishop's vicar for administration," said Bishop Freeman, in part, "to see to it that you and other officers of this cathedral duly observe and keep its constitution, statutes and customs, in the spirit set forth by Our Lord

In the tenth chapter of the Gospel according to St. Matthew. Likewise I appoint this chapter for your special lesson, and bid you read, mark, learn and follow it."

The escorting dignitaries retired, leaving the new dean alone in his stall—with only the Cathedral vergers, James Berkeley, standing vigil nearby. Dean Phillips raised his right hand to beckon the worshippers to kneel, then dropped to his knees in prayer.

Senate Representative

Marching in the processional through the doors of the South Transept to the Crossing, and then into the Great Choir were boys and men of the Cathedral choir, members of the Cathedral Chapter, clergy of the Washington Diocese and participating bishops and canons. Flags of the Christian Church, the Cathedral and the United States were borne.

The great organ sounded as the choristers entered the edifice—not breaking out into the "The National Hymn" until they reached the rood screen and the steps leading into the Great Choir.

As the choristers took their places, they passed near the Vice President and Mrs. Wallace; Senator and Mrs. Carter Glass and other figures from the Senate where Dean Phillips has been chaplain since 1937.

Canon Smith Reads Certificate

Acting in place of C. F. R. Ogilby, secretary of the Cathedral Chapter, Canon Charles W. F. Smith, of the Cathedral staff, read the certificate of election to the tall 66-year-old Dean Phillips, retiring rector of his native Epiphany Episcopal Church in downtown Washington.

For the first time in the cathedral's history, Bishop Freeman yesterday chanted the "Veni Creator Spiritus" (Come, Holy Spirit). The congregation read the responses.

The brief services came to a close with the new dean offering a prayer for God and country at the high altar and the choir singing the benediction.

Members of the new dean's family who were on hand for the installation were Mrs. Phillips, Mal and Mrs. Guido Perera, son-in-law and daughter of Dean Phillips, and Guido, Philip and Lawrence Perera, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Wallace McClenahan, also son-in-law and daughter of the new dean.

Gen. Drum Orders 'Blues' Big Push

The attack began yesterday, when part of the First Armored Division moved rapidly up roads outside the maneuver area to Charlotte, N. C., while other armored forces nibbled at the Blue right. At Charlotte the armored column was met by Blue tank attackers, who fought it in the suburbs of that city and harried it all the way down to Monroe, N. C., where other Blue antitankers joined in the fight.

From Monroe, the armored column moved southward along Highway 151, across the front of the Twenty-sixth Division. Another column of the First, driving north out of Pageland, S. C., struck across the face of the Twenty-ninth Division's Fifty-eighth (Maryland) Brigade.

To meet this attack, everything in the Twenty-ninth that would throw a shell was rushed to the front. Battery A, 110th Field Artillery, was wiped out by tank fire. Batteries C and D lost heavily. Elements of the 111th Field Artillery (Virginia) were borrowed from the Eighty-eighth Brigade and thrown into the battle.

Big Guns Moved Up

The big 155 millimeter guns of the 176th Field Artillery (Pittsburgh) were sneaked from their positions comfortably far behind the line and thrown forward to the pointblank at tanks. All guns of the Twenty-ninth antitank battalion were trailed into battery, hub to hub across roadways, strung out across cotton fields, hidden in woods and behind hills. Antitank companies and heavy weapons companies of the infantry regiments went forward to fight alongside the antitankers. Corps and Army antitank units came up to lend their weight of men and metal to the job of stopping tanks.

Why Snow Parking Ban Dec. 15? Takes Snow 10 Pages to Tell

By Howard F. Wentworth

Here it comes again—that much discussed snow removal parking ban.

Yesterday's bright sun and mild, nippy air apparently failed to dissuade the District Engineering Department from announcing the usual 2 a. m. to 8 a. m. snow-parking prohibition on some 81 miles of arterial highways from December 15 to March 15.

For the first time, in collaboration with the Department of Vehicles and Traffic, the engineering division issued a 10-page document "explaining" reasons behind the controversial regulation.

Col. Snow Tells All

Taking evident cognizance of public sentiment against the "no-parking-snow-removal" rule, an official statement—released by Lieut. Col. Beverly C. Snow, Assistant Engineers Commissioner—reported that the city must each year plow some 908 miles of main thoroughfares and boulevards.

The cost, it was reported, ranges from $10,000 to $200,000, depending on severity of the winter.

The major cost, according to announced figures, is for hauling (not plowing) snow from about 25 miles of streets in the downtown business area.

Perhaps to justify the all-night parking ban—snow or no snow—the engineering department's report goes into considerable detail. It explains at one point that during the past 43 years snow has fallen here on 416 occasions—or about 10 times a year.

It was further pointed out that 135 of these snowfalls resulted in a depth on city streets greater than 2 inches.

Obviously in response to many inquiries, the report issued yesterday asks: "What is the purpose of the ban on parking from 2 a. m. to 8 a. m.?"—and then answers:

"The purpose has generally been misunderstood. It is not for the physical removal of snow by hauling, because the cost is prohibitive. Rather, it is to make it possible to plow snow up on the curb so as to open traffic the full width of the street."

Ban Held Essential

Without this ban, the report continues, a serious traffic condition would exist after a heavy snow.

And again apparently considering public complaints, the lengthy report answers the question: "Why are automobiles plowed in at the curb?" with:

"Flowing cannot be stopped whenever a parked automobile is encountered, as this would leave a windrow (drift) of snow greater than the width of the plow extending into the street causing a traffic obstruction and hazard."

In one of the reasons given for prohibiting night parking during the "snowy" season, the report stated that plows are brought into service when there is an accumulation "of as little as a 2-inch depth" and must have a free passage along principal streets.

Women Enter New U. S. Fields, Make Good, Says Mrs. McMillin

Although the increase in number of women entering Government service during the "first year of our defense" did not equal the increase in numbers of men, the feminine worker has entered several new fields and promises to be of major importance during succeeding emergency years.

This is shown in a booklet called "The First Year," released yesterday by the Civil Service Commission and covering women's participation in Federal defense activities through June, 1940.

Written by Mrs. Lucile Foster McMillin, woman member of the Civil Service Commission, the study shows that Government women are doing 73 different types of defense work—ranging from less dramatic typing and filing to coding of secret messages and marking of airways.

Mrs. McMillin advised women to study their talents and be taking training that would enable them to take jobs that may have to be vacated by men or that the Government may have to add to its expanding program.

Twenty-seven women were singled out for special mention as occupants of key positions in the defense effort. They were Mary Anderson, chief of the Women's Bureau;

Mary I. Barber, food consultant to the Secretary of War; Mary McLeod Bethune, director of Negro affairs for NYA; Katherine C. Blackburn, assistant director, Office of Government Reports; Pauline Baker Chambers, nurse consultant, OPM; Harriett Elliott, associate administrator, OPA; May Thompson Evans, OEM; Katharine A. Frederic, OEM; Bass Goodykoontz, Office of Education; Alice Hager, Civil Aeronautics Board; Oveta Culp Hobby, expert consultant to the Secretary of War; Lytle Hull, Treasury; Florence S. Kerr, WPA; Henrietta S. Klotz, Treasury; Helen Mitchell, health; Thelma McKelvey, OPM; Blanche Noyes, CAA; Ruth O'Brien, Bureau of Home Economics; Hazel Siebling, Bureau of Home Economics; Ruth Van Deman, Bureau of Home Economics; Mary N. Winslow, OEM.

Civil Engineers Hear Somervell On Army Building

Brig. Gen. Brehon B. Somervell, chief of construction division, office of the quartermaster general, addressed the annual meeting of the Washington Society of Civil Engineers at the Mayflower Hotel last night on the Army's emergency construction program and described the project as the greatest building campaign ever undertaken by this country.

"At the present time," he said, "it represents an expenditure of three and a half billion dollars. About two and a half billion dollars worth of this is being performed by the construction division, office of the quartermaster general, the remainder by the Engineer Corps, U. S. Army. Every phase of it is designed to supply critically needed facilities or material for military purposes."

Gen. Somervell said that, to date, the program has met many of the needs in advance of schedule. It has provided shelter and training quarters for a million and a half troops and is erecting munitions factories.

WHEN BETTER AUTOMOBILES ARE BUILT BUICK WILL BUILD THEM

IN THOSE four little words you can sum up the final compelling reason why these times call for engines like the Buick FIREBALL straight-eight with Compound Carburetion.

Take an engine the size of Buick's, give it ordinary, flat-top pistons and you get one level of power and performance.

Take the same size engine with Buick Domite pistons to shape and squeeze the fuel charge into a more compact and tightly packed form—and you get additional power from the same volume of fuel mixture.

Go a step further, the whole Buick way, with Compound Carburetion's two smaller carburetors on the job, and you get still more power along with greater range—the most fruitful use of every drop of gasoline you buy.

In a word—more good per gallon than the same size engine can give you without these Buick "exclusives."

That's not all there is to this husky Buick power plant by any means.

There are sturdier conditioning rods to meet heavier tasks, there are oil-cushioned main bearings to assure longer life, there are individually measured combustion chambers to insure that every Buick engine will measure up to its full rated horsepower—a step not taken in any other standard production passenger car engine.

But two things—FIREBALL design and Compound Carburetion—are enough to make it plain that in times when all cars must last longer, serve better, and operate at minimum cost—there's one best buy, and that's Buick.

The Savoyard Operettas Are Washington Bound

Touring and Local Companies Booked Here;
Those Old Songs Somehow Sound Like New;
Items of News and Gossip of the Theater

THE D'OYLY CARTE COMPANY'S preoccupation with diverting the embattled British Isles with their incomparable productions of the Savoyard operettas, come blitz, paratroops, invasion or whatnot—a Spartan band, those D'Oyly Carters—will not deprive Washington of its annual grist of the Gilbert and Sullivan works. In fact, the Capital will be doubly blessed in this regard, all within the span of an imminent fortnight.

It comes out of the National Theater's typewriter that the week of December 15 will bring the Gilbert-Sullivan Opera Company to E Street in a popular repertoire comprising "The Mikado," "The Pirates of Penzance," "Trial by Jury," "H. M. S. Pinafore," "The Gondoliers" and "Iolanthe." Among the cast to be heard in these perennials will be such veterans at their familiar chores as John Hendricks, Florenz Ames, Robert Pitkin, Kathleen and Helen Roche, Helen Lanvin and Grace Garnett.

The indefatigable Mr. Ames possesses a peculiar facility in leaping back and forth between musical and nonmusical stage hits with astonishing regularity. No sooner does he wind up a successful engagement in something like "First Lady," for example, than he pops back again almost immediately in a tuneful item like "I'd Rather Be Right." And Robert Pitkin has been bound up in the Gilbert and Sullivan lines and lyrics until he is practically a D'Oyly Carte Company all by himself. And that's only the half of it.

On December 8, 9 and 10, in Roosevelt Auditorium, the Columbia Light Opera Co., 70 strong including cast and chorus, will be presenting "The Gondoliers." It is being boasted by those in charge that expert assistance by authorities familiar with the actual production of Gilbert and Sullivan operas in London assures the local company, directed by Ethyl Manning, absolute fidelity to the famous Savoy Theater traditions. If that brag is backed up by performance, there will be nothing to worry about.

There is another Hollywood "star" in town, in case you hadn't heard. Mrs. Arthur Lange, for several days now, has been visiting her sister, Miss Alva Joesting, in the Copley Courts Apartments. As Marjorie Joesting, Mrs. Lange will be remembered by permanent residents as a former member of the late Father Hurney's St. Patrick's Players and also as one of the most typically representative "Miss Washingtons" ever selected to bear the Capital's banner high in the Atlantic City Beauty Pageant.

Nostalgia's Ugly Head Again
So we finally got around to reliving "Birth of the Blues," in the Warner projection room yesterday—and missed seeing Tarz, the hungry Hollywood lion, eat the Community Chest unit leader, as a result. Of course, when they first came out, we were only three months old, but it certainly was a bang to hear "Cuddle Up a Little Closer," "Wait 'Til the Sun Shines Nellie," "By the Light of the Silvery Moon," "Melancholy Baby," "St. Louis Blues" and a lot of the other of those vividly melodious memories revived and embellished by such promising moderns as Bing Crosby, Mary Martin, Jack Teagarden, Brian Donlevy, Eddie "Rochester" Anderson and the rest of the strappings in the cast. Heigho, it seems no longer ago than the day we landed on Plymouth Rock—or vice versa! Incidentally, you've never heard the "St. Louis Blues" sung as the lament it was written to be, until you have heard the colored artist cast as Ruby sing it—she does. Director Victor Schertzinger—with the former Washington newshawk, Monte Bell, sitting in—did a nice job on this one.

Detmar Poppen, who plays Lutz, the pompous valet, in "The Student Prince," and has ever since a time when the memory of man runneth not to the contrary, says he holds a record of some kind or other. He hasn't been idle, either winter or summer, for the past 30 years. Winters, he has been engaged in musical comedies, either on Broadway or the road; summers, in musical stock or vaudeville. Personally, we didn't know there was that much stock and vaudeville left. Anyhow, Mr. Poppen doesn't look that old. Or didn't last spring.

The current season of production at the King-Smith Playhouse will be inaugurated the week of Friday, December 12, with "Squaring the Circle," three-act comedy by Valentin Kataev. Following this first comedy to come out of the "new" Russia, sometime in February, will be T. S. Eliot's psychological drama, "The Family Reunion" and as the third play on the schedule, Strindberg's "The Spook Sonata," a fantastic melodrama to be staged in the surrealist manner. The season will be brought to a close with a musical based on Charles Dickens' play of "The Strange Gentleman."

Not-a-Wink-of-Sleep-All-Night Note
Did that lion really eat that Community Chest fellow?

Palace

So deep a mystery, so adroitly solved by William Powell and Myrna Loy, deserved a second week. So this morning "The Shadow of the Thin Man" begins its second semester on the screen at Loew's Palace Theater.

There is considerably more than mystery, Mr. Powell and Miss Loy in this latest charade based on the characters created by Dashiell Hammett. It affords Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer another opportunity to display its profligacy in production. Director Woody S. Van Dyke, a whiff at the sort of crisp comedy he handles so superlatively well, and all of the members of the cast their individual, if sometimes momentary, occupancy of the spotlight. And besides that, there are Master Dickie Hall, as the Nick Charles' precocious offspring, and Asta, displaying his medals as the best of the canine comedians.

In this subject, Nick Charles and Nora are thickly mixed up with the sporting fraternity and a crooked gambling ring that wouldn't murder anybody for less than a dime. Hence we get to the race track, the razzle-dazzle matches, the offices of the warring syndicate, a few smart night spots and a couple of dumps before Nick turns up the guilty wretch in the person who is least suspect. All very gay, considering that it's murder at the bottom of it all, very baffling and very easy to take.

A Gentleman's Book of Maxims!

Hollywood, Nov. 26.
Because he's working in "A Gentleman at Heart," Milton Berle gave me his rules on the subject: "In a crowded street car, give a lady your seat. But recently this has been altered. Nowadays a gentleman carries two straws. He and the lady draw for it."

ANN SHERIDAN

(But Milt should have been with my Molly the other day when she saw a man grab the seat, offer a lady—a stranger—his lap, and she took it, the whole way downtown.) "Always tip your hat to a lady. If you don't own a hat, tip your toupe. . . If you're driving along and you pass a lady with a flat tire, don't stop. A lady shouldn't go out with flat tires. . . Always rise when a lady leaves your table. Also when she returns. But when the waiter brings the check, get up and leave. That will get a rise out of her. . . When a lady speaks, pay strict attention. Married men can skip this. They ought to know by now. . . Never select topics of conversation that your girl friend doesn't understand. . . Always compliment her, even if you have to say, 'that's a lovely Hedy Lamarr profile I wish you had!'"

Ann Sheridan showed me a fan letter written by an Australian soldier from a dugout in the Libyan desert. Said he: "I hear you're having a little trouble with your studio. We're having some trouble here, too, having been bombed over 1300 times in five months." That's more times than Ann's been suspended.

RKO-Keith's

"Suspicion," Alfred Hitchcock's expertly contrived comedy-mystery drama derived from the widely read novel of "Before the Fact," continues a second week on the screen at RKO-Keith's Theater, with Cary Grant, Joan Fontaine and Nigel Bruce at the head of a cast that includes Sir Cedric Hardwicke, Dame May Whitty, Heather Angel, Isabel Jeans and numerous others of the top flight.

The story, with which certain important liberties have been taken, is primarily a psychological study of a gently bred young woman who precipitately marries a handsome wastrel to whom all manner of despicable deeds are attributed. Treachery and deception are among the least of his transgressions—from all appearances. It is by no means a surety that murder would cause him any appreciable pause. Consciousness of all this drives his bride, little by little, fairly out of her mind. She builds up as precious a menagerie of bugaboos as ever kept a delicately constituted lady awake at night.

Then comes the great revelation that violates the spirit of the book but is as logical as need be, for all of that. Essentially a little grim in its major development, "Suspicion," nevertheless, is thickly punctuated with incidents of delightfully comic content. Needless to say, with such a cast, it is impeccably played, especially by Miss Fontaine, who here confirms all previous impressions that she is a remarkably competent young actress. Mr. Grant is beyond, but not above, reproach and Nigel Bruce is the source of a great deal of the picture's most whimsical humor.

The continuing short subjects are splendid auxiliaries of a bill that was deftly plucked from the top drawer.

In 'Hattie' Cast

Lucien Prival, Duke York and Fred Graham have been set for roles in "Panama Hattie," Ann Southern, Dan Dailey, Jr., and Red Skelton feature with Norman MacLeod as the director.

Price Of Liberty

Having rejected the Gore "overall" price bill, the House now faces the formidable task of rewriting the Administration's selective-price-control bill by amendments from the floor. The Banking and Currency Committee, which reported the latter bill, has voted to restore a licensing provision which had been eliminated from the original bill and also to reinstate a section authorizing the price administrator to buy and sell commodities in the open market. Registration of these controversial provisions would greatly improve the bill now before the House.

However, the objection is made that licensing would lead to complete regimentation of business and that the power to buy and sell commodities would make the administrator an "economic czar." Criticism of this kind clearly shows that some Congressmen would rather risk disastrous inflation than trust the Administration with the authority it must have in order to establish a really effective system of price control. Of course, the power to punish a recalcitrant businessman by withdrawing his license to do business would lead to intolerable abuses in the hands of an incompetent official. But Mr. Henderson, who will presumably continue to function as price administrator, is both competent and conscientious. There is no reason to think that he would abuse the power vested in him. And experience in World War I proved that the licensing system is a powerful club to hold over the heads of nonconformists. In fact, Mr. Henderson quotes former President Hoover as saying that licensing is the "backbone of all control."

Exercise of the right to buy and sell commodities in the open market provides another very effective means of price regulation. Again, the fact that such powers are subject to abuse is no decisive argument against granting them to a responsible official in a time of grave national emergency. Regimentation which would be dangerous to our system of free enterprise in normal times of peace becomes a necessary protection to the public in abnormal times. When we fought in 1917 in the hope of making the world safe for democracy we surrendered the right to carry on our business and private affairs as usual for the sake of preserving our liberties. The situation today calls for the same kind of sacrifice.

It is necessary, moreover, to support the administrative agencies of the Government by giving them the powers required to do a good job. It would be absurdly illogical for Congress to vote billions in support of the President's defense policies and then refuse to set up an effective system of price control on the ground that the agents of the President would thereby acquire too great powers of control.

Libya: Second Stage

In the first days of the new Libyan offensive British expectations ran high. For the first time in this war, it was pointed out, British troops engaged in combat with the Nazis enjoyed something like equality of mechanized equipment and air power. The early sweep of General Cunningham's forces into enemy territory gave substance to these expectations. Dispatches from London last Monday told of German panzer units trapped southeast of Tobruk, with every certainty that they would be cut to pieces in a few days. The road to Tripoli would then be open.

But these high hopes have so far failed of fulfillment. The result has been an upsurge of pessimism regarding Britain's chances. The resistance of the German mechanized forces has proved far more formidable than the British appear to have anticipated. While heavy losses have been inflicted on the enemy, severe losses also have been suffered by the British—so severe, in fact, that at one stage the fighting had to be entrusted almost entirely to infantry units. The campaign in Libya, in other words, is proving no walkover for the British.

It would be wrong, however, to assume that the British offensive has failed. While the fighting at Reghez, southeast of Tobruk, still hangs in the balance, a British force moving in from Grarabub, near the Egyptian border, has succeeded in capturing the desert oasis of Gialo, 200 miles to the west, and is now in a position to reach Al Agheili on the Gulf of Sirte. Should this operation be successful, the Axis supply lines from Tripoli to the present front in the western desert would be cut and the possible retreat of General Rommel's panzer divisions would be cut off. Daring in its strategy, this drive across the desert constitutes the most hopeful aspect of the British offensive. It is worth watching.

Press Freedom

It has hitherto been a cardinal principle with the Administration—indeed, with every Administration in our history as a free nation—that whatever an American newspaper said about a foreign country or a leader in a foreign country was strictly its own business. The totalitarian governments, anxious to pin totalitarianism on other countries, always have insisted otherwise. All of them at one time or another have entered protests with the State Department against derogatory comments about their institutions or leaders either appearing in American newspapers or uttered by well-known Americans. On every occasion the Administration has denied any responsibility. It may be recalled, for instance, that several years ago a nationally known magazine, now defunct, ran a cartoon showing the Japanese Emperor in an undignified role. The Japanese, who think of their Emperor as a godhead, protested officially, but got not the slightest satisfaction from the Administration. Indeed, the State Department has seemed to take pleasure in the opportunity so afforded of rubbing in the reason that the Administration had no responsibility for such public utterances. The reason is, of course, that freedom of the press prevails in the United States.

It was inconsistent, therefore, for President Roosevelt to assume a sort of responsibility for the comment of Time magazine on the late President of Chile. The comment itself was couched in ambiguous language. To be sure, it could have been and was read as casting a reflection on the private habits of President Cerda. And, as events have turned out, it is deplorable that the comment was ever made. President Cerda is now dead, and, aside from any question of taste, the comment may accentuate the delicate political situation that has been left in Chile. The incident, specifically, might be capitalized by elements hostile to this country in a way that might put those elements in power in Chile. That, no doubt, explains the extremity with which Mr. Roosevelt expressed his displeasure. Perhaps the vigor of Mr. Roosevelt's apology may undo any mischief which the Time comment may have caused in Chile. But any such result does not justify the attitude which was taken by the President of the United States. If this Administration could not assume any responsibility for derogatory comments at the expense of, say, the Japanese Emperor, it could not assume any responsibility for derogatory comments at the expense of President Cerda. Mr. Roosevelt was inhibited from so doing by the freedom which the press enjoys in this country.

Our continental friendships are very precious in these days of world turmoil, and every newspaper has an obligation of its own in keeping those friendships in repair. But there never was and never will be any entente worth while which has to be maintained by Government-sponsored restraint. Yet that is what the President seems to be anxious to promote. But of far more importance is the impingement of the President's intervention upon the freedom of the press. By taking Time to task for its remark the President has left the door open for an indirect—but nonetheless potent—censorship of the American press on its Latin-American coverage. He has thus put the responsible newspapers of this country in a thoroughly embarrassing position. From now on they will feel that any remarks on Latin-American affairs will somehow be connected with the United States Government in Latin-American minds. In another way the President will share the embarrassment. His intervention plays far more into the hands of the Nazis than Time's comment. Nothing could please the totalitarians more than this success in their drive to get our Administration to put itself in a position as monitor of the American press.

Migrant Problem

Every thoughtful American will feel profoundly relieved that the Supreme Court, in declaring the California anti-migrant law unconstitutional, has reaffirmed the right of Americans to move freely across State boundary lines. However, the invalidation of this law and the consequent voiding of similar statutes passed by 27 other States puts upon the Federal Government a very definite responsibility to deal constructively with the problem of migrant labor. During the years of depression the influx of penniless job-seeking workers into California and a number of other States constituted a menace to community health and morals, and imposed heavy financial burdens upon State and local governments. Un-American exclusionist acts which have the effect (as charged) of transforming the States into economic concentration camps are a national, though deplorable, result of such mass movements.

Steinbeck's The Grapes of Wrath presents a dramatic portrayal of the discrimination practiced against an Oklahoma farm tenant family fleeing the "dust bowl" area to seek a living in California. That unforgettable saga is much more than a plea for equality before the law of all Americans. It is also a telling argument in favor of centralized Federal control over the interstate movements of jobseekers—not with a view to restraining them but for the purpose of guiding them toward a real haven. If workers are permitted to move en masse along false trails, tragedies are bound to follow. The time has long since passed when the pioneering spirit could safely be given free rein in the expectation that it would benefit the wanderer as well as the community to which he migrated.

The remedy is already at hand. Through a Nation-wide system of public employment exchanges the Federal Government is already beginning to direct the movement of jobseekers to an increasing extent. Thus employers are urged not to bring in new workers from outside areas if idle labor can be found in the neighborhood. And workers, in turn, are told where employment openings exist, and where not to go. Migratory movements resulting from the seasonal character of agricultural labor, to be sure, create special problems both for work seekers and for communities harboring them. That, too, is a situation calling for Federal aid and assistance so that local communities will no longer feel the need of un-American exclusionist policies that constitute a threat to national unity.

Ribbentrop's Assurances

It may be a coincidence that the speech which Joachim von Ribbentrop, Hitler's foreign minister, made to the signatories of the Anti-Comintern Pact yesterday was couched in language and expounded ideas made familiar to Americans by our isolationists. Germany, he said in effect, has already won the war. No amount of American assistance to Great Britain, not even the formal entry of the United States into the conflict, could change that fact. In the meantime "the American taxpayer must bear the chief burden of this English war against Germany." Should it come to war the "responsibility is clearly on Roosevelt," since it is "fantastic foolishness" to assume that Hitler has any designs on the United States or this hemisphere.

Was the Nazi foreign minister deliberately echoing his voluntary and involuntary helpers on this side of the water? Or was he only expounding views which the Nazis and our isolationists share in common? In any case Ribbentrop's outburst will fool few Americans. His record shows that he cares as little for the truth as does his Fuehrer and, like Hitler, is a convinced believer in the usefulness of the "big lie" oft repeated. His assertions that the war is already as good as won must be placed side by side with other assertions of similar import made over a period of many months. They are brazen untruths. The war is so far from won by the Reich that Germany finds herself forced to make a greater effort than ever to keep from losing. The very circumstance that Germany has had to make such a great to-do about such a shoddy assemblage of puppet and captive states as the meeting in Berlin shows how far off is that "new order" which Hitler long ago announced as having come into being.

In the meantime what Ribbentrop failed to say was at least as important as what he said. In dealing with the Far Eastern situation, he made no such commitment of support to Japan, in the event of a conflict with the United States, as that recently made to this country by Winston Churchill. Indeed, he practically told the Japanese that they will have to fend for themselves. For a nation as close to total victory as Ribbentrop says Germany is, that is strange indeed. But his failure to offer Japan support is only in line with existing realities. Germany has enough trouble on her hands and is in no position to render any assistance whatever to the Japanese.

MORALITY

Morality itself, what we call the moral quality of a man, what is this but another side of the one vital force whereby he is and works? All that a man does is physiological of him. You may see how a man would fight, by the way in which he sings; his courage, or want of courage, is visible in the word he utters. In the opinion he has formed, no less than in the stroke he strikes. He is one, and preaches the same self abroad in all these ways.

Beloved, others looked on you and said
That you were tall, and that your eyes were sweet;

They praised the sculptured beauty of your head,
The moving eloquence of hands and feet.

And, having seen you thus, they dared believe They knew and understood the whole of you;

But I, in that first moment, could perceive Beforehand what the years have shown as true:

Could see you unembittered in the day
Of seeming failure (triumph still to me);
Could see that you would have the strength to stay

Where perils were that lesser men would flee.

So, finding you more brave than you were fair,
I half forgot the color of your hair.

Letters To The Editor

Santa Claus

I was glad to see, on the front page of your paper, that Mrs. Roosevelt believes in telling the children about Santa Claus. But don't call it a lie, even a white lie; Santa Claus is the truest thing we know. It is the name that we grown-ups give to that fine flowering of human kindness and love. Of course, our idea of Santa Claus has to change as we grow, just as our idea of God does. To a little child God may seem a kindly old gentleman sitting on a throne, and his concept changes as he grows until, as a developed adult, he sees Him as an all-pervading spirit. When quite young children can learn to see Santa Claus as a poetic symbol of a very real thing. If they talk of Old Man Winter, Jack Frost and the fairies who bring the spring, they can readily see Santa Claus in the same light. Something makes fathers and mothers and all the other good people want to go to all that work and expense and Santa Claus is our name for it. If we believe that God loves his children, and that spring will follow winter, then of course we believe in Santa Claus. Our job as adults is to emphasize the true aspects—the joy Santa brings, the wonder and beauty of giving rather than our manufactured details, such as how long Santa's beard is. The question should be not "Do you believe in Santa Claus?" but, "How can we help Santa Claus to bring joy on Christmas Day?" Of course Santa Claus is true.

I wish this idea, Mr. Editor, could be given to all the little boys and girls, and grown-ups, too, who read about the First Lady's faith.

Dollar Revaluation

When we had acute deflation we devalued the dollar by raising the price of gold. Now that inflation threatens, we should revalue the dollar by lowering the price of gold. That would serve to check gold imports, to decrease exports of merchandise, encourage imports of commodities and keep prices down. It would, in effect, be equal to a universal increase in real wages and salaries instead of the increase in money wages, which will otherwise be necessary. The liberty to own and to hoard gold coin should also be restored to the people, for if this is not done there is real danger that gold may lose its value.

A City Planning Experiment

Considerable agitation is going the rounds for a subway in the business section of this city to relieve the existing very severe traffic congestion, but a subway should be considered a last resort, both because of the very great cost and also as the entrances to the subway will further mar the beauty of our Nation's Capital.

We should avail ourselves of the opportunity to experiment in city planning by locating some of the proposed Federal temporary office buildings in outlying sections of this city on Federal-owned vacant land on Bladensburg Road, on the site of the National Training School for Boys and on the National Arboretum. Wide arterial highways radiate to all sections of the city from these sites, and public utilities and ample land for parking are available.

Opportunities for experimenting in city planning are very rare and when we consider that traffic congestion has almost eliminated rapid transit in our business section, this opportunity should not be ignored. All industrial corporations have research departments who spend millions of dollars annually in experiments to improve their production. Their progress is measured by their research and experimental in city planning whenever possible.

World Union

In 1918 we thought it was too much to ask a few thousand of our soldiers to support a central world army—an army which, if created, probably would never have lost a single man. In 1941 we have lost a few hundred of our soldiers to the young men to bear arms; justly so, but not to save all the people of the world; only to save ourselves.

We must win this war. We will win it! We won the last war, but we lost the peace. Let us win this war and the peace too! Let us keep faith with the boys now in camp—the boys who may have to die as a result of our failure to see the truth. Let us keep faith with the boys who sleep in France. We can still accomplish what they died in order that we might accomplish. They died in order that we might live to improve the world. Perhaps it is too late to give a better world to their children, but we can give a better world to their children's children. We can bring about the day when God's kingdom shall be on earth as it is in Heaven.

The first step toward this is to win this war; the second, to abolish future wars, for when we abolish war we shall have abolished starvation and sin to an infinite degree. Let us Americans contribute toward the winning of this war. Let us be sure that this war is won by the Allies, and then let us demand that the United States of America take their place in world affairs, and so conduct herself that neither she nor any other nation shall ever again be threatened by tyrants. It is within our power to correct our ghastly mistake of 1918. We can abolish war if we only desire to do so because enough to make the necessary sacrifice. Shall we do so? A Parliament of Man, a Federation of the World, is the only possible way. The life and happiness of every human being in every land depends on our answer to this question, and our determination to transform the desire into the reality.

Accolade

In view of the fact that Mr. Westbrook Pegler's one-man crusade against racketeering labor is drawing to an unexpectedly successful close, so that he is already casting about for some new outrage to denounce, an accolade or something seems to be in order. Since he already has a medal on this score, we might do worse than to rededicate to him Edward Rowland Hill's impressive poem, "The Reformer." So here's to the best one-man Augean-stable-cleaning team since Hercules:

Before the monstrous wrong he sets him down—
One man against a stone-walled city of sin.

For centuries those walls have been abuilding;
Smooth porphyry, they slope and coldly glass
The flying storm and wheeling sun.

No crinoid, no let the thinnest arrow in.

He fights alone, and from the cloudy ramparts
A thousand evil faces gibe and jeer him.

Let him lie down and die: what is the right,
And where is justice, in a world like this?

But, by and by, earth shakes herself, impatient;
And down, in one great roar of ruin, crash

Watch tower and citadel and battlements.
When the red dust has cleared, the lonely soldier
Stands with strange thoughts beneath the friendly stars.

It is not altogether without malice that this rededication is suggested, since the poem in question is one that is quoted most often, and always with self-approbation, by the one group of people who have done the least to help Mr. Pegler in his crusade against racketeering labor—the professional reformers.

Gold Braid Classic

Come rain, come sleet, come snow, on next Saturday, 95,000 to 100,000 rabid football fans will congregate in the huge municipal stadium in the City of Brotherly Love to witness the forty-second annual gold-braid classic between the Army and Navy elevens.

But a very small percentage of this vast body of souls gathered there to witness a pageant which for color, pomp, splendor and sheer magnificence has not been surpassed since the days of ancient Rome, will appreciate the drab setting in which it had its origin a half century ago.

For many years prior to the first game between the two academies, which was played at West Point on November 29, 1890, efforts had been made to have them "cross swords" on the gridiron, but high-ranking officers in both branches of the service had opposed the contest for various reasons, one of which is best expressed by the late Admiral Stephen B. Luce, a highly respected officer of that day. In a letter to the United States Naval Institute he severely deprecated the tendency of men in the Navy to engage in sport on shore. He had pointed out that there was too much baseball and too much football; that instead of finding recreation in swimming, sailing, rowing and the like, the young naval apprentices and officers generally found it more congenial to seek sport on shore.

In his argument he was strongly supported by other Navy officials.

However, on November 8, 1890, the official Army and Navy Journal carried the following news item, from the Naval Academy: "With permission of the Secretary of the Navy, the Annapolis football team will have an opportunity to try conclusions with the cadets at West Point on the Saturday following Thanksgiving."

That memorable game was perhaps one of the hardest fought in the annals of American football. In the first half Navy rushed Army off its feet, confounding the entire cadet squad with a peculiar code of signals.

"Splice the Mainbrace," shouted Capt. Emmerich, and a hole was torn in Army's center. "Ship" was the signal, and Hartung darted around left end. "Wear Ship" and Allhouse gained yardage around right end. "Anchors in Sight" and Emmerich cut off tackle for a touchdown. "Yesss! Chalk!" "Best Top sails," "Save the Boatbay," and "Columns of Companies" were other terms used by the Navy in their unique code of signals.

The second half was a farce resolved itself into a bitter fight. Play was fast and furious. Both sides were continually warned by the referee, one Mr. Ryndman, of Yale, to cease their rough tactics. After one play six men were rendered "hors de combat," none of whom were able to resume play for over 10 minutes. Quarterback Walker of the Army, after being knocked senseless for the third time, was finally carried to the hospital. "Dutch" Emmerich, who died in the service of his country just 10 years later in Hongkong, was laid out cold on four occasions, but continued in the game, scoring three touchdowns and booting three goals after touchdown squarely between the uprights.

In a letter received from former Commander McGrann of the United States Navy, he writes, "I attended this game at West Point as a guest of manager of the team, and recall quite distinctly that the whole battalion of West Point cadets was continually shouting 'Kill Emmerich,' which aroused my anger, of course." Although the final score was 14 to 0 in favor of the Navy, the West Pointers were heroes in defeat, as Capt. Dennis Michie was the only member of the entire squad who had ever played the game before November 1 of that year. All credit was due Cadet Michie, who had molded together a team in the short space of three weeks. He is reverently called the Father of Football at West Point, where they have erected a stadium in his memory. And it was this game Cadet Michie who, in a captain's role, met death leading his company up San Juan Hill in the Spanish-American War.

Hard feelings were forgotten after the game and peace was made in the evening at a "hop" given in honor of the visiting middies, where to the strains of the intoxicating waltz of that era, the bitterness of the afternoon's battle became a memory.

The unusual roughness of the game appears to be responsible for the change in attitude of some of those who had so violently opposed it in the beginning.

Admiral Luce happened to be one of the notables present at the game, and just before Emmerich resumed play following an injury, and when rough play was at its height, a fellow officer asked the admiral if it was not somewhat inconsistent, in view of his recent letter, to be present at a shore sport, "Oh, not at all," he replied, "this game is just splendid. Look at those fellows yonder. Could there be a finer exhibition of brawn and muscle? A game of this sort gives wind and nerve to a lad, just what is required in a fighting man." Then, turning to a group of Annapolis officials, he inquired as to the relative standing of the Navy elevens in their studies. Being informed they were fairly well up in their classes he said, "Well, never mind where they stand. Those are the men I would like to have in time of action. An officer cannot be too athletic. He cannot possess too much courage and muscle, and I prefer these qualities even to the risk of a little brilliancy in study."

The same spirited rivalry will prevail between the two teams next Saturday as it did just 51 years ago on the unheated Plain at West Point, when 1500 shivering persons stood on a bleak, cold November afternoon, hunched under their winter wraps, watching the two fighting elevens in a game that was destined to become an American institution.

And if the contest this year is as bitterly fought, hard feelings will be fostered when the final whistle blows, as is traditional with every Army and Navy scuffle.

Today And Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

The Berlin Meeting

BY A NICE COINCIDENCE it just happens that as against the 13 governments present in Berlin on Tuesday, there were about 14 other nations—all of them within the sphere of the "New Order" in Europe and Asia. The list of the absentees shows what the peoples most directly involved really think of the New Order. For no nation signed the Berlin alliance which is not occupied by or directly threatened by the German or the Japanese army. And many nations—among them some of the great peoples of Europe—were not present even though they are occupied or are surrounded.

Thus Finland and Denmark signed but not the Swedes or the Norwegians. Slovakia and Hungary signed but not the Czechs, the Poles, the Dutch, the Belgians, the Luxemburgers, the Greeks, the Serbs, the Czechs, Spain, which has a German army on her frontier, signed—but not Portugal or Turkey. Even Vichy France did not sign. And in Asia, the signers were only Japan and her puppet governments in Manchuria and Mongolia, Thailand, the only neutral and independent nation within the pretensions of the so-called New Order in Asia, did not sign.

AS A DEMONSTRATION of unity in adherence to the New Order, the ceremonies in Berlin are an obvious failure. Yet the meeting is of considerable practical importance to the United States because there were present three governments with which we are immediately and directly concerned in very important negotiations. These are the governments of Finland, Spain, and Japan, and the question in each case is whether we must regard their spectacular pilgrimages to Berlin as final evidence that they are irrevocably committed against us.

Much hangs on the answers to that question. On the answer as to Finland depends one of the happiest friendships in international affairs. On the answer as to Spain there depend vital elements in the security of the Western Hemisphere and perhaps also the internal peace of some of the Spanish-speaking nations of the Americas. On the answer as to Japan depends the peace of the Pacific.

FINLAND is an especially painful case because Finland has for 20 years been to Americans the very symbol of a democracy whose word was as good as its bond. Finland has been the symbol of good faith—one of the most precious in a world where there is so much bad faith. Yet in the past few months the good faith of the present government of Finland has come into question. There are two basic assertions by Finland's official spokesmen. First, if Finland entered the war only because Soviet Russia attacked her in June, what are we to make of the fact that Hitler named Finland as his ally in his proclamation of war against Russia? Second, if there was no previous arrangement with Hitler, what are we to make of the fact that Finland, exhausted and beaten into surrender in March, 1940, had an army equipped to take the offensive 15 months later? Where did this equipment come from, and what were the arrangements which made possible the equipping of this formidable Finnish army? Third, if the present government of Finland is not participating in the power politics of the Axis, why did it reach halfway across the world to intervene in Asia by recognizing the Japanese puppet government of Manchukuo?

THESE ARE serious questions both for Finland and the United States, not because Americans will be disposed to blame Finland for fighting a war of revenge and recovery against Soviet Russia but because they bear upon the good faith of Finland's arguments to the American people. It is important to both nations that they should be able to continue to believe in one another. For if Finland is to be a free and independent democracy after this war, she cannot afford to destroy her credit here by saying one thing and doing another. For this reason the Finnish Minister in Washington will do his country a grave injury if he does not make it plain in Helsinki that while Americans could condone what Finland is doing, they will not so easily forget it if they have been duped.

THE PARTICIPATION of the Spanish government in the pact is significant in that Spain was the only nonbelligerent present. The pact, ever since it was first made five years ago, has been the propagandist facade for an offensive military alliance of Germany, Italy, and Japan. Adherence to the pact by other governments, as for example, Hungary and Slovakia, has been the prelude to military participation in the war, and the question is, therefore, whether Spain's pilgrimage to Berlin is the outward sign of a secret agreement by which Spain will join the Axis in the war.

For no one who is informed at all will be in the slightest degree deluded into thinking that this pact is now, or ever has been, an agreement to crusade against bolshevism. That pretension has always been an obvious swindle. For no sooner had Germany and Japan signed the pact, than they turned away from Communist Russia and fell upon other peoples. Japan made war on China, not on Russia. Italy made war on France, not on Russia. Germany made a pact with Russia, destroyed Czechoslovakia, Poland, Norway, Denmark, the Netherlands and Belgium, and when Finland was fighting Russia, prevented the Finns from getting the help they needed. Therefore we know from the acts of the original signers, and now from the speeches of Ribbentrop, that this alliance is directed at the conquest of the outer world, and that the seat of communism is Russia.

Thus, the presence of Spain at this spectacular ceremony must be regarded as a plain warning that Spain, within the limits of her powers, is not a neutral.

THE ACTION of Japan in going to Berlin at this very moment when Mr. Kurusu is in Washington comes as a very sharp reminder that any arrangement with Japan must be examined with the utmost care. For it seems to signify that Japan remains firmly associated with the European Axis, either by intention or because she is irrevocably entangled. It follows that any agreement with Japan, however limited, should be examined and re-examined, considered and reconsidered in order to see whether it increases or diminishes Japan's power of aggression and the opposing power of China, Russia, Britain, the Netherlands, and America. For Japan has made it all too plain that she means to march with the Axis if she has the power to do so.

AND SO, while the Berlin meeting is a farce if it is supposed to give evidence that there is a New Order, while it is fraud as an alleged crusade against bolshevism, it is of ominous practical importance as a sign of the expanding designs of the allied aggressors.

Opium Pipe Perils China

An Insidious Effort

Japan is using the opium pipe and the narcotics trade to create in China "the most colossal sweatshop in all of human history." This is the appraisal of Julian Arnold, for 38 years American consul and commercial officer in China and acknowledged as the Government's ultimate expert on the economic affairs of that country.

Arnold, who retired a year ago as commercial attaché, is in Washington to tell officials of his profound conviction that so long as Japanese armies are in China, peace with the United States is impossible. A Japanese dominated China, he contends, must prove even more disastrous to the United States than a German-dominated Europe.

Convinced that Japan has entered China with a strictly Fascist philosophy of subjugating the nation into a dependency of 450 million serfs, Arnold reports that the Mikado's armies, followed by half a million "carpet-baggers," are using opium as one means of financing their operations. Three years ago, he adds, the view from ramparts of Kun Ming was an endless plain of opium-bearing poppies; a year ago they were gone.

In Japanese-occupied China, however, Arnold states, "tens of thousands of Japanese drug shops have been set up for the sale of narcotics as part of a studied effort to beat down Chinese resistance."

"A gigantic Japanese opium monopoly fattens on the profits. The victims pay for their own demoralization. In sheer self-protection, we shall have to build up our own narcotics defenses to prevent the overflow of this gigantic opium trade into our own country."

Japan's aims and methods in China, Arnold argues, can be demonstrated by its behavior in Formosa, where four millions of Chinese people have been reduced to a condition of virtual slavery and forced to work for their overlords at a mere subsistence wage. The ultimate goal of aggression in China, he adds, is "monopolistic control of the economic resources and man power of the country," and the "blasting of American prestige and cultural relations, lock, stock and barrel, off the Asiatic continent."

The result, in economic terms, would be a "yellow peril of staggering proportions," Arnold believes. The alternative, the opening of China to free trade by all nations, would present a new and great frontier for modern industrialization, he holds.

"Prior to the Japanese invasion," Arnold declares, "China had already embarked upon a modernization program which promised to give us the world's greatest drama. Japan's short circuiting of China's modernization program is one of the greatest tragedies of history."

A modern China, the economist calculates, would require tens of billions of dollars of capital expenditures—"the most alluring investment proposition in the world"—for railroads, highways, motorized transport, communications, aviation, and principally new factories and new machines, hundreds of thousands of which would be needed to modernize China's handicraft era into a modern industrial nation.

The prospect is America's biggest bet for post-war rehabilitation, he contends. Her ability to repay America for the credit necessary to rebuild and modernize the war-torn land consists of its supplies of tungsten, antimony, tin, tung oil, vegetable oils, furs, hides, carpet wool, and enormous variety of handicraft products. He estimates that the United States can easily absorb four times the quantity of imports from China that we took in normal years.

The opening of a free China to world trade would stand to benefit Japan more than present policy of subjugating the land, Arnold believes. By her geographical position, Japan would have a natural advantage in normal commercial relations with a "flourishing neighbor, a progressive, prosperous and peaceful China."

Japanese businessmen realized this, and appreciated the "marvelous strides made by China in its dramatic modernization," Arnold notes. The Japanese Chamber of Commerce in Shanghai adopted resolutions in 1937 pleading with their government "to rectify their erroneous China policy as hitherto employed," and to substitute "one that is morally acceptable to the Chinese government and is practical."

Diplomatic Victory

By John W. White

Mexico Hails New Agreement

MEXICO CITY. THE GENERAL SETTLEMENT just signed between Mexico and the United States is unanimously acclaimed here as the greatest diplomatic victory in Mexico's history. Washington's action in accepting Mexico's original proposal for settling the petroleum controversy after it had been twice rejected by the United States is hailed in official quarters as definite proof that the United States Government is determined not to let the private interests of dollar investments abroad stand in the way of national interests. Mexican leaders and newspapers are holding the agreements up to the rest of the Latin-American nations as the most tangible example yet given of what the Good Neighbor Policy really means to them.

The signing of the agreements made a tremendous impression on the 90 delegates to the first international congress of the very left-wing Latin-American Federation of Labor, which was inaugurated here the day after the settlement was announced.

A prominent Mexican senator, Senor Leon Garcia, expressed what appears to be the general sentiment when he praised the government for its victory in the recent negotiations in Washington. He said he hoped that in arriving at the price to be paid for the expropriated petroleum properties the Mexican government will be guided only by justice and pay no heed either to the interests or the impassioned opinions of the oil companies.

DR. ADOLFO MANERO, outstanding economic authority of the Chamber of Deputies, said that Mexico must take steps to notify all the other Latin-American republics that the Good Neighbor Policy has been crystallized into concrete acts. He said that the new agreements automatically annul the Bucarelli treaties with the United States which he described as an insult to Mexican sovereignty and said Mexico has now recovered its status as a sovereign state.

The government's official newspaper, El Nacional, described the signing of the agreements as being of the utmost importance, not only to Mexico but to all the other Latin-American countries, as proof that the Good Neighbor Policy has at last gone beyond the idealistic field and been translated into action which proves the good neighborliness of the United States toward the other countries of the continent. The editorial, which expressed the official government view, said that the oil settlement put the national interest of the two countries above the unreasoning and selfish pretensions of private interests. This means for all the nations of the American continent, continued the editorial, that the understanding and interests of nations have been put above selfish private interests.

EL NACIONAL called upon the people of Mexico to become reconciled to the acceptance of the tremendous sacrifice involved in the agreement to pay 40 million dollars to the United States in settlement of the outstanding agrarian claims, explaining that this means the definite return to Mexican ownership of vast tracts of land that otherwise would remain in foreign hands.

The Ministry of National Economy expressed the opinion that the settlement will solve many of Mexico's serious industrial problems, especially the difficulty of obtaining necessary raw materials. Eduardo Villaseñor, director of the Bank of Mexico, said the agreements remove the barriers which have prevented the free flow of United States capital into Mexico and expressed the conviction that American dollars will now seek investment here.

Former President Cardenas, who expropriated the American oil properties, congratulated the new government for its victory in the settlement. He was one of the first to telegraph his hearty congratulations to President Avila Camacho on his

8 Billion Dollars More for Defense Gets Approval

A House Appropriations Subcommittee gave approval yesterday to another huge defense supply bill—totaling close to eight billion dollars—more than three-fourths of which would go to the Army for ordnance, aircraft, construction at military posts, and other items. The subcommittee was reported to have modified an Administration proposal that it be given complete leeway in transferring military equipment, appropriated for since March 1, to foreign nations. Committee members said the funds in the pending bill were divided in such a way as to give the House an opportunity to decide how much could be used for lend-lease purposes. The new bill, to be reported next week, provides for a total reduction in the $5,687,346,046 estimate submitted for the Army. Other major provisions were said to have provided more than 600 million dollars for the Navy and 200 million dollars for other purposes, including defense highways. A number of deficiency items also were included.

themselves relatively sink in importance, while the Pacific Ocean, the shores, its islands and the vast regions beyond will become the chief theater of events in the world's great hereafter. This vision, says Arnold, will be realized only with peace on the Pacific, peace which is impossible as long as the Japanese armed forces remain in China.

Toothpick Crisis

United States Department of Commerce, National Bureau of Standards, Washington, D. C.

Gentlemen: We cordially invite you to attend a general conference to consider a proposed simplified practice recommendation for toothpicks. The meeting will be held at the Hotel Barclay, 111 East Forty-eighth Street, New York, N. Y., Wednesday, December 3, at 2:25 p. m., under the auspices of the Division of Simplified Practice of the National Bureau of Standards.

Very truly yours

W. E. Brathwaite, Division of Simplified Practice.

"It'll be there," declared Elmer Twitchee today as he "bowed" above letter, accompanied, as it was, by details explaining that among the vital questions to be discussed was the matter of maximum and minimum toothpick lengths, "of lumber recognized as in the category of hardwood."

"It will be a busy day for me, however," explained Elmer, "as I have a meeting that morning with a Government agency to standardize the weight of the common hairpin. And in the afternoon I am to attend a conference on maximum and minimum sizes for needle-eyes and a special session to discuss a Federal over-all length for nutpicks, thumbtacks and parlor matches."

"It is the toothpick situation in this country at this grave hour that fascinates me, however," insisted Elmer, who comes of an old toothpick family. "I thought Washington would never get around to it. I am particularly glad to note that the Government conference is to cover both the round and the flat hardwood toothpick. There has been nothing done about the round toothpick since Polk's administration, and the flat toothpick situation has been almost completely ignored, too."

Editor's Note: Cleveland was asked to adopt a Federal toothpick policy, but would have nothing to do with it. McKinley suggested a toothpick plank in his platform, but nothing came of it. Teddy Roosevelt proposed a maximum length for toothpicks, but switched to pipe cleaners at the last moment. Wilson favored their abolition, but was prevented from doing anything by a warning it would cost him the entire Midwestern vote.

"The toothpick minimum, as set down by the Department of Commerce, is 2 1/2 inches, I see," continued Elmer. "I believe in a flat 3 inch, without bevel edge. I have always opposed the luxury toothpick and advocated the simple working type."

Do you anticipate any conflict? "Oh, I suppose the Tories may want to leave the toothpick situation in status quo, but you know how the Democrats are. If they think the country will be better off with a 2 3/8-inch toothpick, with the flare at the center abolished, and the same gripping surface, I'll be back on the staff, we had better make up our minds to accept it."

Celling Zero It really would not hurt my feelings. If there were certain kinds of ceilings:

A ceiling on the profits of The wartime rich I'd dearly love;

A ceiling on the price I pay for The things I buy, I daily pray for;

A ceiling on the hours they work me I must say wouldn't greatly irk me.

One ceiling, though, I find outrageous, And that's a ceiling on my wages. —Richard Armour.

Flimsy Strike Law Anticipated

George Spelvin, American, U. S. A. Dear George: Well, you poor, dumb dope, I hope you have observed that those paltry fakers of the United States Congress are fixing to double-cross you and sell you out again. As sure as you are born, Spelvin, those political parasites who built up the Brown Shirt terror of the union goon system are going to ally that PEGLER chive between your ribs again and give it a twist and break it off.

They are making a lot of noise about antitrust legislation just now, George, but I am warning you, and I hope you will paste this in your hat and check me when it is done, they won't do anything about the rackets and the racketeers, the extortion and the persecution of such as you.

They have received the President's order to pass some sort of arbitration and cooling-off scheme, but whatever form this law takes, it will affect only war industries and it will be passed only because the President is more interested in fighting Hitler's dictatorship abroad than in saving Americans from the atrocities committed on his own subjects by the Brown Shirts of his own following at home.

YOU CAN paste that in your hat, George, and check me on it, because it will contain a backstairs clause, probably in the cunning and treacherous negative language so common to the New Deal laws and the union constitution drawn by the Muscovite union lawyers, whereby the unioners and their thriving, underworld thugs, or goons, won't have to obey, although American businessmen and the little American stockholder and the worker will.

George, this is about the nastiest treachery in the entire record of this assembly of boss-fearing twisters who were elected to serve as an independent legislative arm of the National Government of a once great republic but now are so utterly predeed that they don't even pretend to conduct their own duties on their own responsibility. Instead, they send over to the White House to ask the boss what he wants them to do and he tells them and they do it his way.

IF YOU THINK they are going to pass any law which would compel the thieves who have been skimming one billion dollars a year off your wages to give you an accounting of your money, you are just out of your mind or living back in the past when we had men in Congress.

If you think they are going to relieve you of the duty of buying ocean yachts and racing stables for a lot of low-lived union gangsters or protect your rights as a human being and an American citizen from the Hitleresque slugs of the goon squads, you are kidding yourself. If you think they are going to do anything to stop the carpenters or the crooks of the Hod-Carriers' racket from extorting good eating money from Americans who want to work on President Roosevelt's war jobs, you are nuts, because they aren't going to do anything that would interfere with the gains of the goons which you have heard described as labor gains.

But you are certainly too smart to think they would do any of these things or that they would require unioners to be American citizens or not to be traitors in the service of Joseph Stalin, whom the President's messenger, Harry Hopkins, wrote about in tones of hero-worship last month.

YOU KNOW they will talk and view with alarm and introduce bills harmlessly, but you certainly must know by now that when the President gives the orders they will roll over and sit up and yap like any kitchen mutt in return for a little silver of patronage thrown to them from the people's own table.

No, George, they aren't fixing to do anything real. It just happens that the President needs some law now to help him put this country wholly into the fight against Hitler's dictatorship without impairing the dictatorship of his own faithful but sometimes erratic goons.

But this law will pertain only to the "emergency" and "defense" and while your kid is off in the North Atlantic being torpedoed or freezing in the Arctic or putting in his time in the Army at home at $21 a month, you still have to pay from $40 to $800 to some mob of racketeers, plus dues and assessments, too, for the right to work and you will have to quit work and go on relief if the union crook says so, because that is the new American way enacted for you by the members of the Ki-Yi Club in the doghouse on kennel hill in Washington, D. C.

Check me and tell me if I am wrong. WESTBROOK PEGLER.

Today's News Sidelight

Gondar, Last Italian Stronghold In Ethiopia, Once Was Capital

Gondar, only remaining Italian stronghold in Ethiopia, was once capital of that African empire, a bulletin from the National Geographic Society points out. The city has been under siege by British troops.

"Situated on a ridge 7500 feet above sea level in northwestern Ethiopia, Gondar is 21 miles from Lake Tana," says the bulletin. "Lake Tana is the source of the blue Nile River which waters the fertile plains of the Anglo-Egyptian Sudan."

"In Gondar a splendid view of Lake Tana can be had from Fasildas Castle, named after the son of Negus Sysenus, famous Ethiopian ruler, who shrewdly recognized the strategic value of Gondar's lofty position overlooking one of Ethiopia's most fertile regions. It was chosen for the capital at the beginning of the sixteenth century."

"At that time, Gondar was only an insignificant group of huts visited infrequently by caravans. Once established as the capital, the village soon expanded to a town and then to a city. Industries sprang up and Gondar became a bustling market and trading center.

"The city reached the heights of its prosperity about six years before the signing of the American Declaration of Independence. Its population then was about 80,000. Civil wars and destructive raids in the eighteenth century, however, led to its decline in prestige. Ruins of sacked castles and palaces of former rulers still remain as symbols of Gondar's former importance."

"In 1935, the former capital's population had shrunk to about 3000 inhabitants. In 1938, after three years of Italian occupation, it again was a busy city with upward of 10,000. Its industries included the manufacture of cotton cloth, saddles, shoes, copper ware, gold and silver ornaments and fancy articles of ivory and bone."

Congressmen Will Take Part In Panel Talks

Three members of Congress and a representative from the Office of Civilian Defense will take part in the panel discussion on "National Defense: Policy and Performance" at the opening session of the Conference on Public Discussion Methods at 8:15 tonight in the Department of Commerce auditorium.

Senator Claude Pepper (Democrat), Florida; Representative Hutton Summers (Democrat), Texas, and Representative John M. Vorys (Republican), Ohio, and Miss Eloise Davison, assistant director of the OCD in charge of women's group activities, will be on the panel.

The address on the same subject, preceding the discussion, will be delivered by Dr. William Yandell Elliott, consultant to the Office of Production Management. Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt will preside at the meeting which is open to the public.

The conference, which will continue tomorrow and Saturday, is sponsored by ten alumnae clubs of Washington and the international relations committee of the Washington branch of the American Association of University Women in consultation with the Office of Civilian Defense.

Post Columnist Addresses Pen Women

Women's City Club Marks 22d Birthday

The Women's City Club celebrated its twenty-second anniversary with a tea yesterday afternoon and an entertainment for members in the evening, at its clubhouse, 736 Jackson Place Northwest.

Mrs. Gladys B. Middlemiss, president, received guests at the tea, assisted by a group of past presidents, including Mrs. Harvey W. Wiley and Mrs. Lyman B. Swormstedt.

Mrs. Arthur Charles Watkins, president of the District Federation of Women's Clubs, was among the guests.

Maria Thomas, soprano, sang solos, accompanied by Mary Izant Couch at the piano. Mrs. Harry L. Richardson, chairman of the house committee, was hostess for the afternoon, assisted by Miss Elizabeth Trump, Mrs. Sylvia Wentworth, Mrs. Anna Belle Stewart, Miss Lida B. Earhart, Mrs. Bruce Hord and Mrs. Frank L. Golden. Presiding at the tea tables were Mrs. Sydney R. Jacobs, Mrs. Cuthbert R. Perry, Mrs. Meta Cole and Mrs. Frederic I. Swift.

The evening entertainment centered around a quiz contest in charge of the club's Junior Guild, whose chairman is Mrs. John T. Luckner.

Patronesses Named for Sale Of Handicraft

Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, Mrs. Henry A. Wallace, Mrs. Claude Wickard, Mrs. Henry Morgenthau, Jr., and Mrs. James Price have consented to serve as patronesses for the sale of rural handicraft by the Capital division of the Women's National Farm and Garden Association, opening at noon Monday in the parish house of St. Margaret's Church.

The sale will continue Tuesday and Wednesday, from 10:30 a. m. to 5 p. m. on both days.

Assisting Mrs. R. Winston Holt, the general chairman, are Mrs. Marshall Wright, vice chairman; Mrs. Frederick L. Lewton, in charge of receiving and marketing; Mrs. Rene Jones Taylor, in charge of arrangement of exhibits, and Mrs. E. J. O'Brien as head of the committee on finance. Mrs. Willoughby Chesley and Mrs. Charles Fairfax composed the committee for the choice of a location.

Among members who have offered their services as sales people are: Mrs. Raymond Pearson, Mrs. Charles Fairfax, Mrs. Carl Casey, Mrs. W. Ridgely Chapline, Mrs. Henry Wold, Mrs. A. Oliver Seaman, Mrs. E. H. Chamberlain, Mrs. E. M. Palmer, Mrs. F. Frank, Mrs. Walter T. Weaver and Mrs. Walter R. Tucker.

A group of women from St. Margaret's Church, under the direction of Mrs. Willoughby Chesley, will serve luncheon each day of the sale.

Garden Clubs to Sponsor Dr. Wyman's Talk

The Bethesda, Chevy Chase, D. C. and Md., Georgetown, Sandy Spring and Washington Garden Clubs are cooperating with the American Horticultural Society in presenting an illustrated lecture by Dr. Donald Wyman, of Arnold Arboretum, Harvard University, at 8:30 p. m. Saturday at Dumbarton Oaks.

He will speak on "Autumn Glories Among the Trees and Shrubs." Members of the clubs and the society may bring guests.

Soroptimists Give Students $1200 In Scholarships

Members of the Soroptimist Club have given scholarships totaling approximately $1200 to students, it was reported by Mrs. Rose Cohen, chairman of the vocational guidance committee, at the club's luncheon yesterday at the Willard Hotel.

The scholarships range from secretarial courses to voice and ballroom dancing. Members who gave the scholarships included Mrs. Mary Catherine Lewis, Miss Marjorie Webster, Mrs. Cohen, Miss Jewell Downs, Mrs. Caroline Stephen, Mrs. Hugh Butler, Mrs. Ethel Fister.

Among members sponsoring the students who were granted scholarships were Miss Maude Alton, Miss Rena Pond, Mrs. Elinor Lee and Miss Mary Bourke.

The club will give a Christmas party for a group of children at its luncheon December 17, at the Willard, it was announced.

Mrs. Smith to Play At Petworth Club Meeting Tomorrow

Mrs. Frances Gutellus Smith, pianist, will present a program of Mexican music at the monthly meeting of the fine arts section of the Petworth Woman's Club at 1:30 p. m. tomorrow at 2200 Sixteenth Street Northwest. Miss Mary Elizabeth Roberts, of Falls Church, Va., will sing several solos.

Mrs. Smith will wear a Mexican costume and will show pictures which she made on a recent trip to Mexico. She is the daughter of the late Mrs. W. L. Gutellus, who served as president of the Petworth Club, 1918-20.

The program will follow a luncheon at 12:30. Mrs. C. M. Seates is chairman of the music division, and Mrs. P. A. Wright, of the art division, with Mrs. H. W. Parsley vice chairman for the section.

Voteless D. C. Women Adopt 13-Point Program

By Lucia Giddens

The Voteless District of Columbia League of Women Voters yesterday set up a 13-point long range program of measures for its active support, including "a true merit system for the District of Columbia, a tax system based on the ability to pay, and assumption by the Federal Government of a fair share of District expenses."

Among specific legislation which the League's board indorses is "the principle of the rent control bill for the period of the emergency only," Mrs. Basil Manly, chairman of the legislation committee, reported at the membership meeting yesterday. "The committee is active in trying to make sure that a properly qualified administrator is appointed," she added.

The board also has voted support of the bill to establish a Department of Labor in the District, she reported.

Recent action of the board on these and other recommendations of the legislation committee were revealed at the league's meeting at the Y. W. C. A.

The long range program, adopted at the meeting, included the following measures: authorized for active support when the Board deems the time to be suitable and when there is evidence that the League is prepared to be effective.

Safeguarding of constitutional rights with special reference to freedom of speech, assembly and press.

Authorization to the Board of Education to maintain and operate a school system based on recommendations of the Blau-Powers report.

Adjustments in educational facilities to meet defense emergency needs.

Protection of the interests of the public as consumers, particularly as living costs are affected by defense.

Slum-clearance and public housing for low-income groups with regard for long-time planning.

Protective legislation affecting wages and hours of women workers.

A unified public program of child care in line with the recommendations of the Keenes report.

Protective legislation for children, such as the child labor amendment and Juvenile Court law.

Public welfare and public health services, efficiently organized and adequately financed and staffed to know and meet local needs.

Progressive social legislation for dealing with women offenders.

Mrs. Eugene Duffield, chairman of the program committee, presented the outline for league action. Its adoption, she said, constituted a mandate to the league to concentrate on these matters.

Preamble Supports Vote, Self-Government

The preamble, adopted as part of the program, pointed out that "to the league in the District of Columbia, attainment of the right and responsibility of voting is fundamental. With full realization of the difficulty of defining municipal and Federal responsibility for the government of the District of Columbia, we believe that self-government should be established in the Capital of our democracy. In short, we work for the establishment and operation of responsible and efficient government."

Mrs. Duffield remarked: "When half the world is fighting to keep democracy, it is unnecessary for us to stress the importance of getting democracy here."

She pointed out that safeguarding of freedom of speech, assembly and press was specifically mentioned in the program "because of the danger of losing them in a crisis."

The league will have a membership meeting for a discussion of those freedoms at noon, December 16 at the Y. W. C. A., it was announced yesterday.

Mrs. Manly reported that the board has voted to support provision for the so-called nine-man (now seven) recreation board; to indorse the principle of tuition for nonresident pupils in the District of Columbia public schools;

Board Reaffirms Former Actions

The board has also reaffirmed its former action in supporting the request for at least one additional unit of public health nurses, adequate transportation allowances for nurses, a director of nursing education. It has reaffirmed opposition to a fixed ceiling for relief; advocacy of an appropriation sufficient to allow relief for employables; and of adequate personnel to administer relief.

The board also reaffirmed support of the child labor bill now pending, and support of the Blau-Powers report on public education in the District.

Mrs. Jesse Adkins, Mrs. Albert Putney and Mrs. Theodore Sheaffer were elected to the nominating committee, with other members named by the league's board and president.

Mrs. B. M. McKelway, vice president, presided at the meeting in the absence of Mrs. Eugene Callaghan, president, who is ill.

The Women's Club of Waycroft will hold a luncheon meeting at the home of Mrs. John C. Shover, 1506 North Madison Street tomorrow at 12:30 p. m.

The meeting, in charge of the American home department of the club, will feature a Malay rice and curry luncheon. A study of a Malay home will follow the luncheon. Mrs. Shover spent four years teaching in a girls' school in Malay between 1915 and 1920.

The fine arts group will have charge of the afternoon program. The life and works of Kenneth Roberts will be studied, with Mrs. Ben C. White giving short reviews of several of his books.

Marjorie Goodyear Plights Troth

The engagement of Miss Marjorie Knox Goodyear, daughter of Mrs. Edmund Pendleton Rogers, of New York, to G. Norman Bacon, has been announced there by Mr. and Mrs. Rogers. Miss Goodyear's father is the late Frank H. Goodyear.

She attended the Chapin School and was graduated from Foxcroft School in 1938. The spring of that year she made her debut and the next winter joined Miss Stout's traveling school abroad.

O. R. T. Board Meeting Scheduled Monday

The Washington section of Women's American O. R. T. will hold a board meeting Monday at 8 p. m. at the home of Mrs. Alexander Fish, 2701 Connecticut Avenue Northwest.

Several members of the District section are planning to attend the membership tea in New York City December 16, at the Hotel Commodore.

Consider Hair, Complexion in Buying Headgear

By Jane Driscoll
The Post Fashion Editor

MUCH ado is made about the fact that certain colors were "made for" this or that type woman. But—what of the man? It is now agreed that men, too, could profit a bit by considering the proper color of hat in relation to hair, complexion, clothing and furnishings. Here are a few brief suggestions from the Hat Style News Service, New York City:

BROWN HAT—For the man with a dark, healthy olive or ruddy complexion. Should be worn with brown or green suits and those mixtures, also with gabardines or coverts. Avoid brown-blue and brown-gray combinations in lighter or medium tones.

GREEN HAT—For the blond or brunette man with healthy or tan complexion. Should be worn with brown or green suits or coats and tan, brown or greenish coverts and gabardines. Acceptable with dark gray or black also.

BLUE HAT—For the man with blue eyes, ruddy, light complexion and any color of hair, except red. Should be worn with brown or gray suits and matching tones of dark blue with lighter blue. Avoid clashing tones of blue, but neutral brown or tans are acceptable.

GRAY HAT—For the blond or brunette man with a light complexion. Gray does not enhance ruddy complexions and brown eyes or hair, but tones them down. Should be worn with blue or dark gray clothing. Darker tones are best, however, with gray or green or mixtures of both. Gray hats are least attractive with brown and tan clothing.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Girl Suddenly Finds Herself Deeply in Love With Man Who Has Long Been Her Best Friend; How Help Him Realize That He Loves Her, Too?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I have fallen deeply in love with my best friend. Among all the boys I have known, he is the finest. We have known each other a long time, have always had great fun together, and have many tastes and interests in common. We seem to be in agreement on almost everything, from cartoons to politics; and our reactions to people and situations are much the same. It is unusual for a man and a girl to see things so much alike, and I have found it pretty wonderful. I believe he feels the same way. He has always seemed to enjoy being with me, and has always confided in me about his work and personal affairs.

But now I have suddenly awakened to the fact that I am head over heels in love with him; and that he is the one person with whom I want to share my life from now on. The only drawback is that I can't tell whether he cares as much for me. I know he likes me—better than anybody else. But whether he is in love with me, I don't know. There have been little special attentions, little thoughtful presents, etc., that lead me to think so; but no real commitment.

I have other men friends, as he knows. And when some mention of them comes up casually, I have detected a hint of concern in his manner, which seems a good sign. When he goes out with other girls, as he sometimes does, I maintain a smiling front; but it scares me nearly to death when I think they may be wonderful creatures, much more clever with men than I am. I don't know much about "technique." I grew up with a family of brothers, and perhaps absorbed the "pal" manner more than I know, because I always get along quite well with men.

I don't especially care about putting myself across as the orchid type, when I am pretty obviously the sunflower! In other words, I would like to win by being myself, which seems to have been good enough up to now. I have no desire to force the boy into some declaration of how he feels toward me—because the draft may be on his heels, or there may be some job uncertainty that I don't know about.

However, it does seem that if he really loved me, he would make the fact clear. And I have reached a point where I want to know whether he does or not. Should I make myself a little less "available," so that he could miss me, now and then? It is important to figure some way of making him realize that I am "the one for him"—and now that I have told you something of the situation, can you offer any suggestions on how to do it? Sincerely, KAY LEE

Let Intuition Be Your Guide

DEAR KAY LEE: It is my impression that you already have the situation so well in hand as to need no suggestions on "tactics" from a third person. All you need is encouragement—to follow the dictates of your intuition in conducting the relationship in such a way as to bring the boy gradually to an answering recognition of the fact that your long-time "fine friendship" has ripened into a mutually shared romantic love. For I am convinced, by what you say, that you are, in all ways, as important to his happiness as he is to yours—and that you simply arrived at a discovery of the dazzling truth a little ahead of him.

Now that you have awakened to the spiritual realization that you are so much in love with him that you want to spend your life with him, your attitude toward him will involuntarily undergo a subtle transformation toward the more mysteriously feminine and provocative side. You will be—without "planning it that way"—less comradely or half-fellow. Your manner will be softer and shyer. You will be more sensitive to his moods; more radiant in his company; undoubtedly more careful about your appearance, utterances and behavior. You will bloom with the "intangible aura of sweetness and beauty that inevitably envelops a woman in love."

This "natural" change will be observed by him—perhaps causing him to wonder, from time to time, "what has come over you?" and to ask himself (and maybe even you), "Have I been overlooking something? Or is it a fact that the girl is getting better looking all the time?" His thought of you will begin to take a more personal turn—and if you follow your "hunch" to be "a little less available," hereafter, for off-hand visits and eleventh hour dates, I predict that he will not be long behind you in reaching the conclusion that you were "made for each other."

Your wish to win by "being yourself" is absolutely sound. Don't worry about the "sunflower" simplicity of your personality. Nor about the fact that you grew up in a family of brothers, and so learned to take "men on the scene" for granted. That is all in your favor—so long as you refrain from "back slapping" or "sisterly" reactions. Margaret Flahback, writing on "Beaus and Arrogues" in the current issue of a sophisticated magazine, warns romance-seeking girls to beware of treating beaux as though they were "men from Mars." She says men "run like a deer" from the girl who greets them with restrained effusiveness. She stresses the value of being "remote and self-possessed," on occasion—as to give Romeo a chance to do a bit of aggressive self-selling, now and again.

And that reminds me to say, in conclusion: If you have been accustomed to "talking your beau's ear off" in your tele-tale sessions up to now, it might be a good idea to try the "soft listener's" role, as a change of pace, in the immediate future. How "soul finds soul" via the medium of one person's listening "creatively" to another's attempts to interpret himself, is analyzed by Brenda Ueland in an article called "Tell Me More," published in the November issue of Ladies Home Journal—an article which I discussed at length in this column two weeks ago. M. H.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

It's in navy water-proof suede with swing skirt over kelly green wool trunks, a navy suede shirt and a kelly green stocking cap.

Protective Foods at Small Cost Possible by Careful Buying

By Ida Jean Kain

WE are beginning to see that it is just as necessary for people to have a liberal diet as to get a liberal education in this land of the free. And while a little education may be in order before the housewife on a budget can be sure of serving her family an adequate diet, there are a few marketing tips that stretch the dollars amazingly.

When fresh vegetables are out of reach, buy canned ones. The modern canning process preserves their food value. In buying the canned products, take note of the weights given on the label, for only by comparison of the contents in ounces can you tell whether a "special" is really a bargain. The Grade B fruits and vegetables are nutritionally as good as Grade A. The only difference is that the A grade is more uniform in size and is heavier in sugar.

It doesn't matter whether a green is low in price as long as the color is good. Never buy wilted vegetables no matter how cheap they are. Crisp greens and tender young roots are always the most economical buys. The old leaves and roots have lost too much of their protective value to be worth taking home.

Buy Whole Grain

As a routine way of boosting your family's vitamin B intake, buy whole grain or enriched flours and cereals and bakery products. The whole grain cereals which have to be cooked are more nourishing and go further than the packaged varieties. There is no better cereal than rolled oats.

Examine the labels carefully to make sure that you are getting the whole grain. Not all brown bread is 100 per cent whole wheat. To please your family, you might serve part dark bread and part enriched white bread. All flour and yeast should be the enriched kind, which costs the same as any other, but is far superior nutritionally.

If you are watching your budget very closely, you will find that day-old bread is much cheaper than that which is freshly baked. It is just as good for your family. And cereals in bulk cost considerably less than those which have been packaged.

When the budget suggests a butter substitute, insist on one which has been enriched with vitamin A. And peanut butter is an excellent and economical spread—it is high in vitamins A, B and G, as well as rich in protein.

Molasses Important

Molasses makes a much more important contribution to the dietary than refined sugar and should be kept on hand for use several times a week. For a delicious and healthful dessert, have gingerbread made with enriched flour and molasses and topped with hot applesauce.

Eggs are eggs, and brown eggs, which cost less than white, are better buys. If possible, each child adult should have an egg daily. Otherwise, include three to four eggs per week in their menus.

Use potatoes every day and dried beans or peas, which are good but cheap sources of protein, several times a week. Vary the meat and have meat organs at least once during the week. A later article will tell you about the economical meat cuts. Cheese is high in protein, vitamins and minerals, and is less expensive when purchased in bulk.

Tomorrow—Planning meals for returned service men.

The Gentler Sex

No More 'Tummies'

THE SIMPLE little word "tummy" has set Mrs. Henrietta DeGoofey off on another Nation-wide reform.

"I do not intend to stop until I have run that silly word out of the vocabulary of the American woman," the celebrated president of the Do Something About It League told her press conference, yesterday.

The reformer said she had become aroused as a result of reading of the "new tummy emphasis" in the gowns designed for the Luchess of Windsor.

"I object not only to the word, but to the style itself," declared Mrs. DeGoofey. "Ninety-nine per cent of women are not designed by nature or their own appetites to wear such a style. It is bad enough for them to protrude behind. Now if we are to have them bustled in front as well, we will have nothing but walking monstrosities."

Baby Talk

Too Prevalent

"However, if they are determined to make sights of themselves with stomach padding, cloche hats and chemise dresses, that is none of my concern—at least for the present," continued the reformer. "What I am concerned is this growth of baby talk such as the word 'tummy' represents. This silly, affected, ugly-sounding word has been steadily creeping in upon us, and if something is not done soon, it will elbow its way into the dictionary."

"Now women are entirely to blame for this—women fashion authorities who think it cute or smart to say 'tummy' nasty nice women, who for some obscure reason think the word 'stomach' is not refined; lazy minded and lazy lipped women who abbreviate every word they possibly can, and juvenile minded women who apply pet names to everything and everybody."

"The word 'tummy' in its very sound is simply revolting to anyone of any taste. But that is not my main reason for campaigning against it. It represents a very dangerous tendency on the part of American women—that of becoming lazy and affected in their talk."

'Nighties,' 'Panties' Are Assailed

Mrs. DeGoofey declared women were becoming victims of what she called the "y" habit. "If there is any word they can rob of its dignity by putting a 'y' on the end of it, they do so. Take this very vulgar word 'tasty.' It seems impossible for most persons to mention food without referring to it in this manner. Now what on earth is the matter with the word 'tasteful,' that is, if food must be referred to at all by such meaningless terms?"

"Then there are the 'nighties.' No one wears a nightgown any more, it seems. Even the good old sturdy word 'panties' has degenerated into 'panties'—which most of us, in order to do, would have to assume curly blonde wigs and lips. The chemise has become a 'shimie'—whatever that may be. Girls are 'cuties' and men are 'sweeties.' Every cat, even a dog-eared old tom cat, is a 'kitty.'"

"Such talk makes me want to tear my hair. And I especially consider this feminine desire to be cute and coy in language a dangerous sign at this time when women, if ever, should be growing up."

Mrs. DeGoofey said she would drop her defense activities for the present to make a tour of the country crusading against "tummy" and all its associates.

"When do you expect to start, Mrs. DeGoofey?" asked a defense coordination columnist.

"Just as soon as my new ensemble is finished," replied the reformer.

"Oh, what is it like?" eagerly questioned a publicity representative of the people industry.

"It is really darling," was the reply. "A two-piece effect in passionate purple with the new tummy—I mean STOMACH emphasis."

Bright Combination

Hollywood, Calif.—Jane Wyman is combining cinnamon with burnt orange in a very interesting color or two-some that proves bright shades will be right even in a snow flurry. Under her Kolinsky coat, Jane is wearing a tailored dress of light cinnamon sheer wool set off by a hat of stitched orange velvet. The hat has a courtly air with soft, rounded crown and narrow stiff brim.

Gov. and Mrs. Edison Return Home After Three-Day Round of Parties

"We're going back home to get some rest," said Mrs. Charles Edison yesterday, after admitting that a three-day round in Washington had "been fun . . . but strenuous." Arriving here Sunday night, she and Governor Edison have been out and about at a continual round of parties, but even then didn't have time to accept half the invitations that came their way. They will leave for their New Jersey home this morning, "but we hope to get back soon," added Mrs. Edison. "When? Oh, I've no idea."

Final fete on the Edisons' calendar this time was the supper party Mrs. Edward Beale McLean gave last evening at Friendship. Honoring the American tenor, Richard Crooks, this event followed the National Symphony Orchestra concert at which he was soloist.

Not among those present at Mrs. McLean's party were her son-in-law and daughter, Senator and Mrs. Robert Reynolds. They are still honeymooning in the South; are now in Miami Beach, Fla., and are expected to return to Washington December 3. Asked recently whether she expected to give a welcome-home party for the newlyweds, Mrs. McLean replied, "No, I don't. What's the use of giving a party for them if they won't come?"

Mrs. McEvoy Returns to New York

Another recent visitor enjoying quite a round of parties here was Mrs. Frederick J. McEvoy, who returned to her New York home yesterday. Mrs. McEvoy, who was widely known here back in the days when she was Mrs. Charles Aubrey Cartwright of London and New York, has been entertained at a number of parties this week, and she finished off the round by giving a dinner herself on Tuesday evening. The party took place at the Carlton, where she was staying.

The former Beatrice Benjamin, Mrs. McEvoy first married Alexander D. B. Pratt of Newport and later Mr. Cartwright. Both marriages were dissolved in divorce.

Mr. and Mrs. Carrere on Visit to Capital

In town for an extended stay are Mr. and Mrs. Robert Carrere of New York, who were here during the first World War when he had a naval aviation job. Slated to get back into service soon, Mr. Carrere is here taking some special courses. A well-known architect, he lived for a number of years in Florence, Italy, and several of his Washington friends now first met him there. Incidentally, he's a double first cousin of Mrs. Sidney Lee and Mrs. Carrere Barbour. He and his wife are staying at the Dodge.

Party patter: The Secretary of the Greek Legation and Mme. Philon were the guests in whose honor Clarence Hewes entertained at luncheon yesterday. M. Philon and Mr. Hewes were en poste in Berlin at the same time some years ago. . . . Mr. and Mrs. Frank Hogan have invitations out for dinner on December 4. . . . The Netherlands Counselor and Countess van Rechteren Limpurg will gather in a few friends for cocktails on Saturday afternoon. . . . The Chinese Military Attache and Mrs. Chu will have as their guest this weekend Miss Margaret Brennecke of New York, who has spent much time in China; left there only a few months ago, and hopes to return in January. . . . Following her visit with Maj. Gen. and Mrs. Chu, Miss Brennecke may extend her visit here a few days to be with her former classmate, Mrs. Sidney Lee.

An "extra man" who has an invitation to dine out in Washington every night during the social season is no novelty around these parts; but when a popular bachelor becomes a benedict and still has just about everybody in town trying to give a party for him—brother, it's news.

Not to Ralph Snowden Hill, however. Ever since he returned to town with his bride, he has been besieged with invitations. Working a new social engagement onto the Hills' calendar at this point would be about as difficult as enjoying a quiet moment at a cocktail party. I can't give it out as fact, but I'd be willing to wager a tidy sum that the Hills get more invitations in a week than the average party-going couple get in a month; and there seems to be no end to the fetes given in their honor. Latest on the list is the 5-to-7 party Mr. and Mrs. Donald Jones have planned for Saturday afternoon.

Eileen Erwin To Make Bow In Baltimore

Miss Eileen Erwin is another Capital belle who will make her bow in Baltimore society Monday night at the Baltimore bachelors' cotillon. She will be escorted by Charles W. Hoff, of Baltimore, and Robert Parsons, of Washington.

Her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Parsons Edwin, will fete her at a dinner before the ball at the Hotel Belvedere. Covers will be laid for 12. Mr. and Mrs. Erwin will go on to the dance as his guests of Fred A. Levering, Jr.

Mrs. W. O. Douglas Luncheon Hostess For Mrs. Clark

Mrs. William O. Douglas, wife of the Supreme Court Justice, entertained at a luncheon in her Silver Spring, Md., home yesterday in honor of Mrs. Charles Clark of New Haven, Conn. Mrs. Clark came down from New England with her husband to attend the "surprise party" which Bruce Smith gave in honor of his wife's birthday Tuesday night at the Mayflower, as did the other out-of-town guests at yesterday's luncheon.

Guests were Mrs. Robert H. Jackson, Mrs. Thurman Arnold, Mrs. Karl West, Mrs. Bruce Smith, Mrs. Luke Stapleton, Mrs. Abe Fortas and Mrs. Peter Atkinson and Mrs. Wesley Sturges, of New Haven.

Charles S. F. Smiths To Fete Couple

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Saxon Farley Smith will entertain at a cocktail party in their apartment at Wardman Park this afternoon from 6 until 8. The party will be given in honor of Miss Roberta Quirk and Oscar FitzAlan Douglas 3d, brother of the hostess who will be married on Saturday at noon in the Blessed Sacrament rectory.

Assisting the hostess will be Mrs. Robert Quirk, mother of the bride-elect; Mrs. Ellison DuRant Smith, mother of the host and wife of Senator Smith; Mrs. J. F. McFeaters, sister of Miss Quirk, who is coming from her home in Cleveland, Ohio, for the wedding; Mrs. Robert Thach and Mrs. Smith Pierce, sister of the host.

Mrs. Frank T. Hines Hostess at Luncheon

Mrs. Frank T. Hines, wife of Gen. Hines, was hostess at a luncheon party at the Sulgrave Club yesterday. Ranking guest was Mrs. Paul V. McNutt. Guests included wives of the National Legion officials connected with the Washington office.

Engagement Announced

Miss Dorothy McCrory, whose father, Samuel H. McCrory, announces her engagement to Lieut. Russell E. L. Stanford, U. S. Army Reserve, son of Mr. and Mrs. Brooke L. Stanford, of Birmingham, Mich. Miss McCrory was graduated from Iowa State College in Ames, Iowa, and is a member of Gamma Phi Beta sorority. Lieut. Stanford was graduated from the Michigan College of Mining and Technology and is now stationed in Washington. No date has been set for the wedding.

Laura Church Is Married To Gene Mako

The wedding of Miss Laura Mae Church, daughter of Mrs. Charles Benjamin Church, of this city, and Gene Mako took place yesterday in the St. Ignatius Loyola Church in New York. Mr. Mako, ranking Davis Cup tennis player, is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Bartholomew Mako, of Los Angeles, Calif. The Rev. Thomas Delahant officiated.

Joseph C. Mattingley, of Leonardtown, Md., an uncle of the bride, gave her in marriage. She wore a white satin gown with a deep yoke and shoulder puffs of Chantilly lace. The dress ended in a long train and her veil was of English tulle with a halo clustered with orange blossoms. Her bouquet was camellias and bouvardia.

Mary MacArthur, 11-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles MacArthur (Helen Hayes) was maid of honor and only attendant. Paul Lukas, well known actor who has been a friend of the bridegroom's father since they both lived in Budapest, Hungary, served as best man. Ushers were Donald Budge, of Los Angeles, Calif., Richard Saltsman, of New York City, MacKendree Skinner and John Donohoe, both of this city.

Following the ceremony, a reception was given at the home of Mrs. MacArthur's mother, Mrs. Catherine H. Brown, 25 East End Avenue. The bride, who was graduated from Georgetown Visitation Convent Junior College here, also attended St. Mary's Academy in Leonardtown, Md., and St. Joseph's Academy at McSherrystown, Pa. She was graduated from the American Academy of Dramatic Arts in Carnegie Hall, and has appeared as an actress in "The American Way," in New York.

Mr. Mako attended schools in South America and the University of Southern California.

Knowltons' Party Celebrates Wedding Anniversary, Birthday

A double celebration was in order at the home of the Robert Knowltons yesterday afternoon when they entertained at a cocktail party at their place on Waterside Drive. White flowers—lilies and carnations—gave hint of the wedding anniversary the young couple were celebrating—their third. Also on hand for the party was the hostess' sister, Marta Trucco, who received many a "happy birthday" toast during the afternoon.

Mrs. Knowlton received, wearing a black crepe frock with an orchid perched on her shoulder. Marta had also chosen black, accented with antique silver jewelry, and she, too, wore an orchid. Unfortunately the other members of the family, the girls' father, who is the former Ambassador of Chile, Manuel Trucco, and his son and daughter-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Manuel Trucco, Jr., were unable to come down from New York for the party.

Among the invited guests were Mr. Edward L. Buckley, who married the Knowltons three years ago in a brilliant ceremony at St. Matthew's Cathedral. Also invited were the Peruvian Ambassador, Manuel Freyre y Santander; the Argentine Ambassador and Senora de Espil; the Ambassador of Brazil and Mme. Martins, the Minister of Bolivia and Mme. Guachalla, the Second Secretary of the Brazilian Embassy and Mme. Gouthier, Fernando Sabola de Medeiros, of the Brazilian Embassy, and Portuguese Minister de Bianchi.

Still others who were asked to drop in after 5 o'clock were the Assistant Air Attache of the French Embassy, Lieut. Michel Dorance; Eienne Burin des Roziers, also of the French Embassy; Jose Lasa, of the Cuban Embassy; the Misses Mary and Edith Wright, Miss Betty Vander Straten-Ponchoz, Miss Eleanor Flood, the First Secretary of the Belgian Embassy, Jacques de Thier; Miss Eleanor Flood, Mrs. William T. Mann, Miss Ruth Dove, Miss Jane Culbertson, Rafael Lepkowski, Denys Smith, Arthur Vandenberg, Dick and Sterling Bolling, Mr. and Mrs. Allan Moulton, Mr. and Mrs. Creighton Peet, Mr. and Mrs. Martin Vogel, Jr., Mr. and Mrs. Warren Lee Pierson, and several dozen others.

Canadian Minister To Give Tea for Retiring Attache

Honoring the retiring Air Attache of the Canadian Legation and Mrs. Kenny, the Canadian Minister and Mrs. Leighton McCarthy will entertain at a tea next Wednesday afternoon. Expected to arrive in time for the party are the new air attache, Air Commodore George Walsh and Mrs. Walsh.

Air Commodore and Mrs. Kenny will leave shortly to spend the winter in the South. As the first air attache of the Canadian Legation, Air Commodore Kenny also established the office of military attache when he came here the first of last year. He served in both capacities for some months until relieved of the military attache duties by Brig. H. F. G. Letson. The air commodore is now taking time off to recoup his health after the strenuous months of double service.

Mrs. Kenney is the daughter of the Right Hon. Arthur L. Sifton, former Secretary of State for the Dominion and one of the signers of the peace treaty at Versailles.

Mrs. Van Rensselaer Is Feted by Mrs. Ward

New Yorker Will Return Home Today; Mrs. John Stanley Receives With Hostess

By Carolyn Bell

With a New Yorker as honor guest, Mrs. Dorothy Lee Ward was hostess at a reception yesterday afternoon feting Mrs. Peyton Van Rensselaer who will return this afternoon to her home—after several days of hectic partying in the Nation's Capital.

Mrs. Ward's home at 2400 Massachusetts Avenue was aglow with lights and between the hours of 5:30 and 8 o'clock, guests—some dressed for dinner, others dashing in from late office hours—streamed up the curved stairway and into the drawing room. Here, the results of Mrs. Ward's many years of travel, and particularly of her time spent in the Far East, were easily discernible. Priceless jade lamps were placed about the room and yesterday rust chrysanthemums were used in profusion.

Mrs. Ward wore a Schiaparelli model of white sheer fashioned on Grecian lines. The scarf of the frock was appliqued with flowers of silver lame edged in brilliant. A purple orchid completed the ensemble, Mrs. Van Rensselaer wore a back net gown, sprinkled with sequins and set off with a brief jacket and a corsage of gardenias. A cluster of egrets was perched in her hair.

Also receiving was Mr. Ward's niece, Mrs. John Boyd Stanley, smartly gowned in a gold lame frock made with a sweetheart neckline, long tight sleeves and pencil-slim skirt. She carried a cluster of flowers. Leaving the party a bit early, Mrs. Stanley was hostess last night at a surprise birthday party for her husband.

Mrs. Barnett

Attends Party

"Mrs. Barnett and I have met for the first time since the first World War," Mrs. Ward was telling friends in common yesterday. She was referring, of course, to Mrs. George Barnett, widow of the commandant of the Marine Corps, who is a very dear friend of Mrs. Van Rensselaer. Although Mrs. Barnett and Mrs. Ward have probably been "brushing shoulders" so to speak at various Washington parties, they laughingly became reacquainted yesterday.

Holding court of her own was the bonnie Representative from Maryland, Katherine Byron, who was accompanied by her mother, Mrs. Goodloe Edgar. A ruffled white collar completed her black ensemble and white was repeated in her small black hat. Mrs. Lee Murphy, wearing smart brown ensemble with a fur jacket, chatted with Mrs. Blanche Tyler, whose wide-brimmed hat was trimmed in velvet.

After greeting their hostess, guests wandered into the dining room where a sort of "help yourself" buffet was arranged. The table was centered with the new flat decoration motif—clusters of peach gladioli arranged in spray fashion. Taking advantage of the handsome turkey, Mrs. Charles Duell fixed himself an almost man-sized sandwich and proceeded to enjoy it. Mrs. Duell, with a lush pink coat thrown over her ensemble, chatted with a group and, incidentally was receiving congratulations on her new invention, a pill-box—a medicine container not a defense mechanism.

Gen. Allen Gullion reports that his son, Edmund, is now on the West Coast before taking off for his new duties with the foreign service. With Gen. Gullion were his houseguests, Col. and Mrs. Roger Williams. Mrs. Williams wore a dinner gown of black trimmed in gold and red embroidery. Mrs. Ambrose Diehl, only recently arrived in Washington from San Francisco, was there yesterday.

Gen. Gullion

Has House Guests

"I am supposed to ask every man in the room wearing a gray suit and glasses, if he is Dr. Boyd," laughed Mrs. Hurban, wife of the Czechoslovak Minister. Note: Mrs. Hurban did not locate Dr. Boyd.

However, she did chat with Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Burke. Mrs. Burke had discarded her usual black for a most becoming purple velvet ensemble and a trick hat trimmed in velvet. Lady Chalkley, wife of the commercial counselor of the British Embassy, was there as were Mrs. John Allen Dougherty, Mrs. Edward Willbur, Mrs. Stanley Hornbeck and Mrs. Lionel Atwill, who wore a navy blue cape over her shoulders.

Holding a group spellbound with his Irish wit was John O'Leary. He talked with Mrs. Charles McGee of Chicago and Mrs. Irene Caldwell, pretty in an all-black outfit. Mrs. Emil Hurja chatted with Henry Meem, and Mrs. Meem, smart in gray, was not far away sampling a glass of champagne. Robert Hinkley was there as were Mr. and Mrs. Carlos Nagel, Kenneth Watson, Mrs. McCeney Werlich and Clarence Hewes.

George Waller, former Charge d'Affaires of the United States in Luxembourg, attended the party yesterday as did Mrs. Morris Carfriz, wearing a bright green dinner gown; Col. Jess Bennett Maj. W. Sanderson Detweiler, Mrs. Peggy LeBaron, a pretty blonde from Norfolk, who wore a red fox jacket over her ensemble; the Military Attache of the Spanish Legation, Karl Wessel; Mrs. Clarence Norton Goodwin, Mrs. Edith Randon, who wore a black velvet suit and pink hat, and many others.

Luncheon Honors Miss Stanley

Feting Miss Mary Jane Stanley, who will marry Cary Euwer in February, Miss Florence Fisher entertained at a luncheon at the Mayflower yesterday.

Among the group that congregated for cocktails in the Pan American Room before going on to the dining room for luncheon were Mrs. Yu, wife of the second secretary of the Chinese Embassy; Miss Gloria Grosvenor, Miss Marjorie Souby, Miss Jane Davis, Mrs. Thad Brown, Jr., Miss Mary Gruman, Miss Laura Belle Wyatt, Miss Beverly Marshall, Miss Sybella Clayton and Miss Anita Callias.

Miss Saunders, Mr. Alexander Are Married

Yesterday, at the Chevy Chase home of her parents, Miss Janice Fairfield Saunders, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Saunders, became the bride of Harold Bell Alexander, son of Mrs. Robert Caesar Alexander and the late Dr. Alexander, of Mineral Wells, Tex., and Washington Smilax was banked against the fireplace and maroon and gold chrysanthemums completed the floral decoration of the living room.

The Rev. J. Hillman Hollister officiated at the 4 o'clock ceremony. The bride was gowned in duobonnet fashioned with a velvet basque bodice and full taffeta skirt. A lei of velvet leaves encircled the neckline and basque, and she wore a coronet of matching leaves with ruching. A locket, which has been worn in weddings in the bride's family for some time, was at her throat and she carried an old-fashioned nosegay of carnations, lilies of the valley, sweetheart roses and violets. She had no attendants.

Charles Haynes Alexander was best man for his brother, and ushers were Robert Caesar Alexander, another brother, and William Putnam Saunders, brother of the bride.

A reception for intimate friends followed the ceremony in the dining room. White bridal flowers decorated the bride's table. Mrs. Saunders chose a black crepe gown for the occasion and a corsage of gardenias while Mrs. Alexander, mother of the bridegroom, wore a brown and gold ensemble and corsage of gold chrysanthemums. For traveling the bride wore a black ensemble with pink trim. Her corsage was gardenias. After January 1 the couple will live at 118 Thirty-fourth Street.

Mrs. Alexander attended Wilson Teachers College. The bridegroom attended the University of Texas and George Washington University.

Aileen Harris Entertains for Mabel Phillips

Miss Aileen Havlin Harris entertained at luncheon yesterday in honor of Miss Mabel Phillips, of New Haven, Conn., who is here visiting her brother and sister-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. U. Bonnell Phillips. Miss Phillips, who has been here since Sunday, will return to New Haven sometime next week.

A Mexican decoration motif was augmented by Mexican food served in gay pottery dishes. Guests were Mrs. U. Bonnell Phillips, Miss Achsah Dorsey, Mrs. W. W. Everett, Jr., Miss Ruth Quinn, Mrs. G. Maxwell Armon, of Frederick, Md., and Mrs. Bradford Swope, who with her husband is the house guest of her parents, Dr. and Mrs. Chester Swope.

Miss Harris will entertain at a dinner Friday night in the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. George Harris, of Woodland Drive.

Society Buys Labrador Goods To Aid Grenfell Hospitals

By Patricia Grady

Still in a buying mood after Ann Archbold's Chinese Fete the day before, official and social Washington turned its purchasing attention to another part of the globe yesterday afternoon, at the sale of Grenfell Labrador Handicrafts in Mrs. James Lawrence Houghteling's home on Wyoming Avenue.

During the tea hour, guests arrived to find their hostess in a simple black costume accented by gold thread-trimmed pin tucks, with a pencil in one hand and a professional-looking sales book in the other. Assisting Mrs. Houghteling and her committee were Miss Sita Finkenstaedt, Miss Sylvia Szachenyi, Miss Alice Barry, Miss Kitty Hill and Miss Elaine Darlington.

Mrs. Donald Downs, all in black, was looking for "something cute for my husband's bar." Mrs. Wayne Chatfield-Taylor, wife of the Undersecretary of Commerce, exchanged reminiscences of New England with Dr. Ethel Bunker, as they looked over the display of mittens knitted by convalescent patients in Sir Wilfred Grenfell's famous Labrador hospitals. Mrs. David Furkes, whose silver fox trimmed hat matched her coat, brought with her her mother, Mrs. Paul Noyes of Chicago. Mrs. Noyes, who is staying at the Anchorage, is helping her daughter hang pictures and settle furniture in her new home in Georgetown. Mrs. Noyes expects to return to Chicago after the Christmas holidays. Miss Bessie Kibbey selected a hand-woven rug of frozen, as they looked over the display of mittens knitted by convalescent patients in Sir Wilfred Grenfell's famous Labrador hospitals. Mrs. David Furkes, whose silver fox trimmed hat matched her coat, brought with her her mother, Mrs. Paul Noyes of Chicago. Miss Bessie Kibbey selected a hand-woven rug of frozen, as they looked over the display of mittens knitted by convalescent patients in Sir Wilfred Grenfell's famous Labrador hospitals.

Mrs. Harold Smith greeted the late-arriving Mr. Houghteling, who told her about his newspaper days in New York and Chicago. "May I buy you a present?" asked Mr. Houghteling of his gracious wife. But before she had a chance to reply her young daughter, Louise, had assured him that he could buy her one and proceeded to point out her preference in arctic jewelry, fur-lined parkas and similar northern articles on sale.

Others seen purchasing wares, sipping tea and sampling pastry tidbits were Mrs. William D. Connor, Mrs. John Allan Dougherty, Mrs. Emile Davies, Mrs. Mason Gulick, who has recently leased her Georgetown house and moved into an all-Chinese decorated one on Nineteenth Street; Mrs. Edward Meigs, Mrs. Macneil of Barra, Mrs. Henry P. Erwin, Mrs. Randolph Hagner and Miss Carolyn Nash.

Skill others were Mrs. Melvin Hall, Mrs. Walter Distler, Mrs. Charles Tompkins, Mrs. Ernest Draper, Mrs. Hamilton Wright, Mrs. Hoffman Philip, Mrs. Keith Merrill, Mrs. Fernando Cuniberti, Mrs. Barney Phillips, Mrs. A. Chamber Oliphant and many, many others.

Lilla LaGarde's Wedding Soon

Invitations are out for the wedding of Miss Lilla Stedman LaGarde, whose marriage to Ensign Frank J. Enright is to take place soon. Miss LaGarde is the daughter of Maj. and Mrs. Richard LaGarde, U. S. Army, retired, and the wedding is to take place at the LaGarde home, Highlandtown Farm, in Montgomery County, Md.

Ensign Enright, who is a member of the New York bar and at present is on active duty in the Navy Department here, is the son of Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Enright, of Somerville, N. J. The bride-elect is the granddaughter of the late Col. and Mrs. Louis A. LaGarde and Rear Admiral and Mrs. B. F. Lamberton.

Mrs. Rixey Smith Honors Visitors

Mrs. Rixey Smith was hostess at a tea yesterday afternoon at her home on Macomb Street. Sharing honors at the party were Mrs. Lewis J. Mooman, her mother, Mrs. Charles Urchel, of Oklahoma City, and grandmother, Mrs. Joseph A. Frates, of Tulsa.

Assisting the hostess yesterday were Mrs. Royal McKenna, Mrs. Gardner Booth and Mrs. Preston Delano. Attending were Mrs. Carter Glass, Mrs. Blair Bannister, Mrs. Bernard D. Jones, Mrs. Smith Blair, Mrs. Douglas Rollow, Mrs. Allan Blair, Mrs. Marie Gasch, Mrs. R. R. Bagger, Mrs. Homer Millard, Mrs. George Shee and Mrs. Harry Blair.

Miss Walker, Mr. Lord Wed

Transfiguration Episcopal Church was the scene of the marriage yesterday at 5:30 p. m. of Miss Anne Guy Walker, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Irving Scott Walker, to Edward Carter Lord, son of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Lord.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore an ivory satin gown fashioned with a long torso and full gathered skirt which fell into a train in the back. Her long sleeves came to a point at the wrist. Her all tulle veil was fingertip length, and she carried a shower bouquet of white button chrysanthemums.

Maid of honor was Miss Mary Frances Eastham, who was gowned in rust velvet with matching velvet turban. The dress had short sleeves, sweetheart neckline and a long, full dirndl skirt falling from a long torso waist. An arm bouquet of rust pompon chrysanthemums completed the ensemble.

Bridesmaids were Mrs. James B. DePue, sister of the bride, and Mrs. William A. Schmidt. The former wore gold velvet with matching turban, and Mrs. Schmidt wore forest green velvet and turban of the same material. Both carried arm bouquets of rust pompon chrysanthemums.

Howard C. Lord was best man for his brother. Ushers were Irving Scott Walker, Jr., and Harry L. Walker, brothers of the bride, and Harold Boesch and William A. Schmidt. The couple left on a wedding trip in Pennsylvania, the bride wearing a brown ensemble.

Mrs. Mabel Peach Mediran and Mrs. Celia Louise Jeffrey have returned to Washington after a visit to Jacksonville, Fla., where they were the houseguests of Lieut. Comdr. and Mrs. Paul Leavens, of the United States Naval Air Station.

Cabmen at Odds Over Zone Plan

Group Splits Up On Proposals For Increasing Income

District taxi drivers were found last night to be split wide open on the question of rate changes now being considered by the Public Utilities Commission.

A survey of District cab drivers by the Washington Post disclosed that two entirely different methods of changing rates are being advanced in filling stations, at Union Station, in coffee shops and other places where cab drivers congregate.

Plans Outlined

The two plans are as follows: 1. That present zone lines be left unchanged with a 30, 40, 60, 80 cent zone rate established. Fares are to jump each time another zone is entered with the "free zone" eliminated.

2. That zone lines be thoroughly overhauled to eliminate inequalities and to consider changes in the District street map. The first downtown zone would be drastically cut in size with rate to be based on a first zone fare of 20 or 25 cents. Material cut from the first zone would be added to the second zone with other lines changed in rough proportion.

To reduce the number of unprofitable long hauls, some of the drivers in this school would also add a fifth zone between the third and fourth zones.

The P. U. C. at a recent hearing granted District cab drivers a "temporary" 30-cent first-zone rate pending the collection and study of complete operating data from all cab drivers. No final decision on the rate question is expected until after January 1.

A plan providing for a 25-cent first-zone rate with a smaller first zone is under consideration by the P. U. C. It is understood that Engineer Commissioner Charles W. Kutz favors this plan with Chairman Gregory Hankins uncommitted.

Reports that the P. U. C. may approve this plan created a furor yesterday in some cab quarters where the trial 30-cent rate has been popular. It was freely stated by some drivers that cabs would be parked in an indefinite strike if a 25-cent rate were approved.

Threat Scoffed At

Other drivers, however, scoffed at this threat, stating that drivers have been threatening to strike for ten years but never have because of their fear that some drivers would keep their cars on the streets and "clean up."

Some drivers believe a smaller first zone will improve their incomes by eliminating unprofitable long runs in that zone.

Some of the "worst" runs in the zone include trips from points near Florida and Connecticut Avenues to such distant points as Union Station, House Office Building and New Social Security Building. During rush hours, cabmen often consume more than 30 minutes in such trips, for the minimum fare and no tip.

The drivers are particularly bitter with Congressmen who earn $10,000 a year yet are legendary poor tipsters.

Suggestions for a smaller first zone almost invariably involve placing of Union Station, New Social Security Building, and Capitol office

Daughter Found, Father Announces

ISABELLE PERRIN, 27, member of a prominent Philadelphia family, who had been missing from her home for a week, was located yesterday in New York, according to her father, Edwin O. Perrin, advertising executive. "She has been located and she is all right," said Perrin. "Beyond that there's nothing much I can say."

buildings in the second zone, requiring Congressmen and visitors to the city to pay a minimum of 40 cents to get to the main business area.

Tourists visiting the Capitol would not be penalized under most plans which would keep the seat of government in the first zone.

A typical "revised" first zone was suggested by Ray A. Shaw, driver of a Blue Life Cab, who endorsed a five zone setup. The first zone under Shaw's plan would be bounded by Constitution Avenue, North Capitol Street, Seventeenth Street, and N Street Northwest.

Considerable opposition to these plans comes from officials of the Cab Drivers Union who declare that a smaller first zone would not solve the problem of unprofitable long-hauls entirely within one of the other three zones.

Love's Labor Lost

Cupid Leads To Conviction Of Perjury

Accused of falsifying his bride's age when he obtained a marriage license at Rockville, Md., January 17, George R. Anderson, 23-year-old truck driver, of 1088 Trinidad Avenue Northeast, was convicted of perjury yesterday by a Rockville jury, which recommended leniency.

The offense is punishable by imprisonment up to ten years under the Maryland Code.

The bride, formerly Daise Suggs, who lives with her grandmother, Mrs. Daise Covington, at 613 South Carolina Avenue Southeast, took the stand against her husband, to whom she was married secretly at Rockville two days after the license was issued.

The girl-bride, an attractive brunette, now 17, testified that her husband gave her age as 18 when he applied for the license, although she had told him shortly before, "I don't think you can get a license because I'm only 16."

Under Maryland law, girls between 16 and 18 are required to have consent of their parents or guardians to marry. The marriage of a girl under 16 is invalid in the State.

The girl told the court she had known her husband about seven months before their marriage—since he obtained a room at her grandmother's boarding house.

Testifying in his own behalf, Anderson denied he intentionally gave his bride's age incorrectly. "She told me she was 18," he told the court.

The case was the first tried under a 1939 State statute which makes it perjury to obtain any license through false statements.

The jury, which was given the case at 2:43, returned at 4:37, still unable to reach a verdict. The court instructed the jury to deliberate for another half hour. At the end of this time the jury reached its verdict. Sentence probably will be imposed tomorrow.

615 Registrants Face January Call to Colors

Crooks and Kindler Score In Constitution Hall Concert

By Ray C. B. Brown

Hans Kindler conducts the National Symphony Orchestra on Wednesday night in Constitution Hall. Soloist: Richard Crooks. Program: "Namenfeier" Overture, Op. 115 (Beethoven), Symphony No. 49 in F minor (Haydn), "Where'er You Walk" and "Sound An Alarm" (Handel), Suite from "The Incredible Flutist" (Piston), "Phydlie" (Duparc), "King Arthur's Farewell" (Warren), Introduction and Wedding Procession from "Zolotoi Petushok" (Rimski-Korsakov).

Had the audience had its way last evening in Constitution Hall, Richard Crooks would have sung more than his scheduled four songs with the National Symphony Orchestra. The program tenor was in excellent voice, and after his resonant delivery of two Handelian arias, "Where'er You Walk" and "Sound An Alarm," he recalled twice by clamorous applause that subsided only because he was to return later in the program. The ovation came after he had sung Duparc's "Phydlie" and "King Arthur's Farewell" by Elinor Remick Warren, when eight recalls

Whose admirable arrangement of Henri Duparc's "Phydlie" was used I do not know, but the orchestral transcription deepened and enriched the original piano part without distorting the proportions. This setting of Francois Coppee's poem is one of the loveliest of Duparc's opalescent songs, and Mr. Crooks read it with communicative feeling. He was dramatically compelling in Mrs. Warren's setting of lines from Tennyson's "The Passing of Arthur," a song of merit with imaginative treatment of the text.

Hans Kindler balanced his program selections evenly between first local performances and items from the repertoire, presenting two of each. He opened the concert with Beethoven's "Namenfeier" overture and closed it with two excerpts from Rimski-Korsakov's fantastic "Zolotoi Petushok." The Beethoven work has not been worn into tatters by frequent performances, and one cannot let it pass the ears inattentively as one sometimes does with too familiar music. In the overture several passages which are surprisingly "modern" both in harmony and instrumentation.

A novelty from the past was Haydn's forty-ninth symphony in F minor, which some busybody long ago dubbed "La Passione" or passionate. It is music which throws into complete confusion the pedestrian division between classic and romantic, for it stands about midway in the list of Haydn's symphonies, and was therefore composed before the later symphonies which are always denominated classics. The first two movements are definitely emotional in the "romantic" sense, while the minuet and final presto are patterns quite conventional in their expression of mood.

The suite from Walter Piston's ballet, "The Incredible Flutist," presented in a fresh aspect a composer known here only by his chamber music. Clever, sophisticated and occasionally spiced with a sardonic wit, it reveals dramatic intuition on the composer and an acute sense of theatrical effects. It is harmonically indigestible for those who are allergic to dissonance, and no melody is allowed to go without some acid accompaniment. The tango, the circus march and the Spanish waltz are delightfully satiric.

The Federal Diary

By Jerry Klutz

Navy and Coast Guard Go on 44-Hr. Week

Navy and Coast Guard employees are now on a 44-hour work week on the order of Secretary Frank Knox. The order applies to approximately 11,000 of the 13,500 employees here. The remaining 2,500 are professional and sub-professional. By law they must be paid time and a half for all overtime directed over 40 hours. While messengers and typists put in the additional four hours without increased salary, the architects and engineers and other professional and sub-professional employees are paid time and a half for all directed overtime.

This provision, of course, is downright unfair to the employees who are compelled to work longer hours without additional pay. However, it can't be blamed on the department. . . . It was the handiwork of Congress. The department, in the interest of treating all its employees alike, urged Congress several months ago to approve overtime pay of all employees. The Senate approved but the House dissented. A compromise was effected whereby only professional and sub-professional employees were given overtime pay.

The joker in the overtime pay provision is the fact that professional and sub-professional employees must be "directed" to work overtime before they can collect. At both Navy and Coast Guard an effort is being made now to "shame" the professional and sub-professional employees into working a 44-hour week. Professional employees have noted with interest this week that overtime work isn't being "directed" until after the new and longer work day. It's sort of a "come-on" technique. . . . If a professional employee leaves his desk on the dot he may cost himself some relished overtime pay.

If this technique to get professional and sub-professional employees to work a 44-hour week doesn't work, it's predicted that Navy officials will ask Congress to amend the law to permit overtime pay either for all or none, and it would probably result in wiping out all overtime provisions.

Shortage of Stenographers

Civil Service Commission is having such a tough time recruiting competent stenographers that it has asked departments and agencies to assign stenographers to stenographic work who are now doing clerical work. . . . E. E. Naylor, assistant chief of Treasury's Accounts and Deposits, has been loaned to OPM. Ward Stewart has been appointed administrative officer of Treasury's Division of Foreign Funds Control. He formerly was NYA personnel officer. Maurice R. Gibson, who entered the Federal service as a stenographer, is now the clerical examiner of the Civil Service Commission.

National Federation of Federal Employees, the largest of the "white-collar" employee unions, is working on a bill which would raise the salaries of Federal workers. Final form of the bill hasn't been determined and won't be until after Congress disposes of the price control legislation. N. F. F. E. said it had gathered data to show that "rising living costs have resulted in widespread hardships among Federal workers."

The President yesterday was urged to promote either Baird Snyder or Thomas O'Malley to the post of Wage and Hour administrator. The plea was made in a letter signed by "Employees of the Wage and Hour Division." It was delivered at the White House by division employees. "We cannot stress too strongly the good effect that a promotion from the ranks would have upon your employees in that division. The appointment of an outsider would be regarded as a rebuke to our efforts," the letter said in part. Snyder is deputy administrator and O'Malley is regional director of the Chicago office.

The letter was an attempt to stop the rumored appointment of L. Metcalf Walling, whose Division of Public Contracts probably will be merged with Wage and Hour. Walling is said to have the support of Labor Secretary Perkins. . . . Off the press is a new booklet by Civil Service Commissioner Lucille Foster McMillin that reviews the first year of women's participation in national defense. Women are now being employed in many positions formerly held exclusively by men.

U. S. Soldiers Grow Bigger

Maybe present-day youths are eating more spinach. Anyway, the average 1941 selectee outweighs the average World War doughboy by eight pounds and his Civil War counterpart by 14. That is revealed by the current issue of Selective Service that says that the average weight of Washington registrants due to report for Army service in January is 150 pounds.

Business Aid In Guarding Plants Asked

D. C. Firms Will Be Requested to Name Defense Executive For Emergency

All Washington hospitals, apartments with more than 500 occupants and business establishments with 100 or more employees will be asked to appoint a "defense executive" to work directly with the Committee for Protection of Industrial and Commercial Establishments, it was decided yesterday.

The committee, a unit of the District Defense Council, held its first meeting at officers of the Board of Trade and stated plans which may lead to such civilian defense activities as first aid courses for store employees and drills for housemaids and waitresses.

Plant facilities and vulnerability of each business will be surveyed, with the thought of zoning the "hot spots" and preparing for their protection, both in the event of raids and of sabotage efforts.

Protection Squads Both day and night protection squads are anticipated, and courses will include instruction in quieting crowds and handling rush-hour situations.

John J. Hasley, chairman, said he has been surprised at the lack of enthusiasm for protective defense work in Washington and said his committee would work to overcome public apathy. Col. Lemuel Bolles, chairman of the District Defense Council, told the meeting that apparent apathy is a "lack of understanding" and predicted a hearty response to the committee's work.

Harry J. Miller, chairman of the subcommittee in charge of defense in the graphic arts industry, assured the group that plants represented by him are thoroughly defense conscious and have been "since 50 per cent of the print shops of London were wiped out in the May air raids."

Ready to Register "We have our map, have learned that we have two very vulnerable spots, and are ready to register everybody," he said.

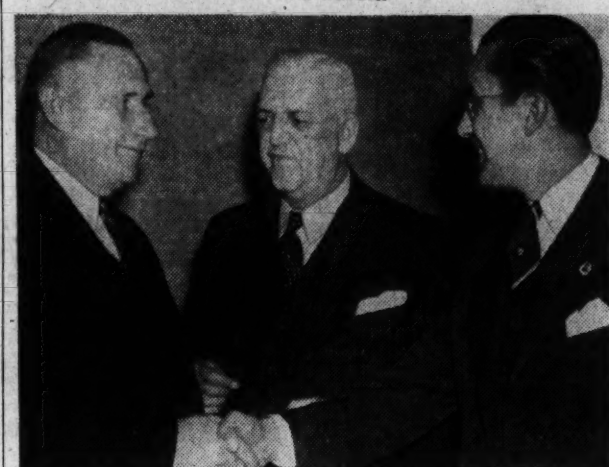

Deputy wardens in Hasley's committee and their special assignments are: Claud Livingston, apartments; Edward D. Shaw, commercial establishments; B. Brent Sandidge, hospitals; Arthur J. Harnett, hotels; Arthur B. Heaton, industrial plants; Rufus Lusk, office buildings; Everett J. Boothby, utilities.

Other members of the central committee include: Miller, Aaron Levin, Col. E. Goring Bliss, A. J. Brien, R. H. Delgado, Rutherford J. Donohy, James H. Ferry, Colman Jennings, Robert J. Wilson, Richard J. Murphy, Fred Nauheim, B. W. Tyler, and George N. Walker.

It Happened Last Night . . .

SHE VOLUNTEERED TO BE AIR-RAID WARDEN—Members of the Hampshire Heights Citizens Association met last night at the home of Don R. Lamborne, assistant deputy air-raid warden, to volunteer their services as civilian defense workers. Here, Lamborne signs up Ernestine Boyer as an air-raid warden.

Bishop Leonard Urges Return To Wesley-Type Evangelism

Bishop Adna Wright Leonard, Methodist resident prelate, last night called for a resurgence of the spirit of real Wesley-type evangelism in the church.

He spoke at a mass meeting of the East and West Washington Methodist districts, comprising more than 150 churches in the District and Maryland, at Petworth Methodist Church, Grant Circle.

The meeting climaxed district conferences held at Petworth and Hamilton Methodist Churches during the day.

"We are in grave danger of losing the passion for public appeal and personal persuasion," Bishop Leonard shouted from the Petworth pulpit before a capacity congregation of delegates representing many branches of the Methodist Church's work in this area.

"Have we lost the high art of personal ministry?" asked the bishop. "Have we lost in our preaching the note of exhortation?"

Capt. Cox Is Welcomed To New Post

Northeast Business Men, D. C. Officials Greet 9th Precinct Chief With Speeches

Capt. Clement Cox officially was welcomed last night to his new job as commander of the Ninth Precinct in Northeast Washington, "responsible for the protection of 78,000 persons." District officials, most of Cox's superiors, a member of Congress interested in the District police department, and nearly 150 members of the Northeast Business Men's Association attended the ceremony.

Assuring the gathering he would "work with you 100 per cent," Capt. Cox declared his intention of breaking up gambling rackets in his territory and closing houses of prostitution—"things I have no use for."

R. F. Camalleri, adviser to the Senate District Committee, introduced as "the unofficial mayor of Washington," predicted "that most of the problems in the area will be ironed out under Capt. Cox." Because most crimes in the District are committed by out-of-town people, Camalleri promised the passage of stricter vagrancy laws here.

Kelly Urges Safety Washington's traffic fatalities this year are appalling, Maj. Edward J. Kelly, superintendent of police, declared, saying most of the blame lay with the pedestrians.

"I urge you to go out as missionaries and ask the people to please be careful," Kelly said.

"You will find Capt. Cox a qualified and competent policeman," he also said, emphasizing that it was a difficult job to fill the shoes of Inspector Richard Mansfield.

Mansfield, head of the Ninth Precinct for nine years in which he established a record in the protection of school children, said he "hated" to leave his "kids" in Northeast. Within the section are thirty-three schools, he said, more than in any other precinct of the city.

He'll Continue Work In a talk with Maj. Kelly recently, the inspector declared, he learned that in addition to his duties as assistant superintendent of police he is going to be able to continue his school traffic safety work.

"It was better than having a million dollars dropped in front of me," Inspector Ira Keck, who supervises a number of police precincts, said he had known Cox for 30 years.

"He is one of the most efficient officers in the Metropolitan Police Department and a good officer any way you take him," he said.

Representative Edward F. Hebert, of Louisiana, a member of the House District Committee and an investigator of the recent Congressional investigation of the department, said Kelly was in a "tough spot." Since his promotion, Herbert said, "the friends of those who have gone out are critics of those who have gone in."

1, 2, 3 and Mr. Roof Becomes A 'Double Grandfather' . . .

1. AT 4 P. M. Tuesday, Philip L. Roof jr., shown in Columbia Hospital with his mother, entered the world, weighing 7 pounds. Four hours later . . .

2. . . PHILIP'S COUSIN, David Marcos, was born in the same hospital and tipped the scales 9 ounces more. Here is David and his mother. All of this made . . .

3. . . A DOUBLE GRANDFATHER of M. L. Roof (center), who promptly got cigars from his son-in-law, George N. Marcos (left) and Philip Roof, his son. Grandpa Roof: "I wanted grandsons and I got 'em!"

Grandpa Roof was all agog day before yesterday. Upstairs in the Columbia Hospital were his daughter and daughter-in-law, both waiting to become mothers and aunts. Downstairs, pacing the floor together, were his son and son-in-law, both waiting to become fathers and uncles.

Grandpa Roof was going to become a grandfather twice in the same day.

Then at 4 p. m. came an infant's wail, and Philip L. Roof, jr., weighing in at 7 pounds, entered the world. Four hours later came another cry, which was Philip's cousin, David Marcos, at 7 pounds 9 ounces, announcing his arrival.

"I knew it. I knew it," laughed Grandpa Roof. "I held out for grandsons, and by gosh, I got 'em."

But he couldn't say any more because his son, Philip L. Roof, and his son-in-law, George N. Marcos, the two new fathers, both stuck cigars in his mouth.

Then from the end of the hall came two nurses with the grandsons.

"I think mine's the best looking," don't you Pa?" asked the son, anxiously.

D. C. Lanham Plea Set for House Floor

Randolph to Urge Passage of Bill Tomorrow Granting District Funds

Chairman Randolph of the House District Committee will seek House passage tomorrow of a bill permitting the District to receive up to two million dollars for eight local projects under the 150-million-dollar Lanham Act national defense construction fund, he said last night.

The House District Committee approved the bill yesterday with an amendment providing that the District government repay the Federal Works Agency the funds loaned within ten years instead of within the 25-year period previously proposed.

"With Washington one of the chief defense centers in the country, it is essential that legislation be passed to make sure the District receives a fair amount under the Lanham Act," Representative Randolph said.

He indicated that a unanimous consent motion will be sought, and expressed the hope that the measure might pass the House tomorrow without waiting for a regular District affairs legislative day.

The list of eight projects approved by the Commissioners were printed in yesterday's Post.

Final legislative action on one of the most important of District measures—the Randolph rent control bill, freezing rents at the January 1, 1941, date—is hoped for today when the Senate is scheduled to vote on it.

The bill returns to the Senate for concurrence in a compromise amendment agreed to in the House which would give the rent administrator greater discretionary powers in determining a fair rent level.

The Senate District Committee will act tomorrow on a resolution granting $20,000 for a study of the District water supply when it meets at 10 a. m. in its committee room. Five House-passed noncontroversial bills will be considered at the same time.

Bar Association Hears Capt. Gatch

Capt. Thomas L. Gatch, assistant judge-advocate, U. S. N., was the principal speaker last night at a meeting of the joint committee of Federal and American Bar Associations on military and naval law, at the Mayflower Hotel.

Capt. Gatch spoke on "Jurisdiction of Naval Courts-martial" and discussed their development from their inception.

The session was presided over by Maj. Gen. Edward A. Kreger, U. S. A., retired. The next meeting of the association will be held at the Mayflower December 10.

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

Help us if Alva Bradley, owner of the Cleveland Indians, hasn't somehow stumbled on a bright idea after all these years. In what must have been a relapse in his genius for picking the wrong man to manage the Cleveland club, Bradley the other day gave the job to Lou Boudreau, his 24-year-old shortstop. There can be no quarrel with that selection.

After he booted Roger Peckinpaugh upstairs into the vice presidency of the club, and before he gave Boudreau the manager's job, Bradley was six, two and even to both the situation. In nine seasons he has hired and fired five managers in what has been a sorry saga of club ownership. Every time Bradley appointed a new manager the announcement always shared immediate interest with the question of who would be the poor fellow's successor.

But after years of floundering about, Bradley has come up with a potent package in his young shortstop. Baseball men have been tabbing Boudreau as managerial timber almost since the day he came into the league three years ago. The lad apparently was cut out to be a leader, if his play on the field was any indication. He held that Cleveland infield together with his competitive fury.

Boudreau has been bossing jobs most of his life, to hear his friends tell it. They like to tell the story of his college career at Illinois, where, as a sophomore, he moved into the varsity basketball line-up and dominated the team immediately. He was the finest basketball strategist in Illinois' history, and his talent for leadership won him also the captaincy of the Illinois baseball team.

Boudreau No Brash Youth

Neither in college nor on the Cleveland club was there any resentment of young Boudreau's self-appointed leadership. For another young fellow it might have been brash, bossing his elders, but Boudreau apparently had a way with him. The Cleveland Cry-Babies, who would debate most anything, were always agreed on one point: Boudreau is a terrific sort of kid.

For a couple of years now he has been the best defensive shortstop in the American League, probably in both leagues. In fact, that may be a sort of tip-off on the fellow's resolute character, because he had to beat down what is, for a shortstop, probably the worst handicap. Actually Boudreau, for all his youth, is slow afoot. In 1939, for example, he hit into more double plays than any man in the league. But he learned the art of breaking on a ground ball, and if there was a better defensive shortstop in the league than Boudreau he must have been hiding out.

He wasn't supposed to be a shortstop, originally. In college he played third base. But because the Indians had, in Ken Keltner, one of the better third basemen, they instructed their Buffalo farm team to convert Boudreau into a shortstop. He made the transition very gracefully.

One of the reasons Boudreau has been the sort of ball player he is, because he's his own harshest critic. A fumble or a wild throw is wormwood to him. Actually, he fines himself for every error he makes, and at the end of the season he turns the wages of his sins over to his family.

He Has a Weakness

Boudreau has a weakness, though. He's an incurable pinball machine addict. He goes for the mechanical pinballs in every town into which the Indians move, and he has to his credit some killings. The things challenge his high sensitivity to delicate touch, and in Chicago he drops around to the factory to see the latest things in pinball contraptions. In the recreation room of his home he has installed one of the fanciest productions ever manufactured. When Boudreau scores on it the thing coughs up 50-cent pieces, no less.

Cleveland has had a high appreciation for the fellow these last three years, and no wonder. Cleveland fans have been privileged to see him make more of his sensational plays than customers in any other town. Even though he anticipates a ground ball there is still a thrill to his actions. Even Joe Gordon, of the Yankees, the fanciest second baseman in history, perhaps, cannot match the near-incredible artistry of Boudreau in the infield.

Out in Cleveland they call him the finest competitor since Ty Cobb, and they may be right about that. Certainly these eyes, which have been watching big league baseball for a long time, have never beheld a man with such ability rise to the occasion with such frequency as Boudreau. In his three years in the league he has probably robbed more men of hits than any other figure in the game over a similar period.

They've dropped him in a tough spot of spot at Cleveland. If, as the indication is, the Indians lose Feller to the Army before next season, Boudreau will have a pretty well-shot ball club on his hands. But one thing it will get: better direction than any Cleveland club since 1926, when another pretty good ball player, Tris Speaker, was in charge. Tab him.

Green Bay Stars Lead Pro Grid Statistics

Hutson, Isbell and Hinkle Dominate Offensive Departments; Play Here Sunday

By Merrell W. Whittelev

Those who accuse the Green Bay Packers of having a three-man team can find vindication in the statistical releases of the National Pro League. In the five major individual offensive departments, the Packers' big three is tops in four and second in the other.

They will be here Sunday, you know, trying to clinch a share of the Western sectional title against the underdog Redskins. Game time has been moved up to 2 p. m. at Griffith Stadium and if you're shy a ticket, stay away. The crop, $5,800, has been sold.

Looking over the leading scorers, it's Don Hutson, probably the greatest end in the history of the league, on top with 75 points and needing only 5 more to break the all-time mark of Jack Manders, 79 in a single season. He needs 3 points to break Manders' all-time league mark of 388, while Packer teammate Clark Hinkle is only 4 shy of the record total.

Hutson's name leads the list of pass receivers with 49 passes for 609 yards, including seven touchdowns. He is already the league's all-time record holder in touchdowns scored. Hutson's passes received total is nearly double that of the runner-up, Don Dewell, of the Chicago Cardinals.

Isbell Tops Baugh

Sammy Baugh has been steadily climbing in the leading pass completion column but it looks as though second place will be his limit as Cecil Isbell, the ex-Purdue University triple-threat back, is far ahead of Baugh and needs only 45 more yards to beat Sammy's league record set last year. Isbell has found receivers on 103 out of 181 attempts for a 56.9 percentage and 1311 yards gained. He has had only nine intercepted. Baugh has tossed 149 in one less game, completed 79 for 530 and 945 yards. He has had 16 intercepted.

Hinkle, 31 years old and in his ninth season with the Packers, is the league's leading field goal kicker, although his average is not so good, 6 out of 14 attempts, the longest from 43 yards.

Hinkle is second only to Pug Manders, of the Brooklyn Dodgers, among the ball-carrying leaders but the Packer fullback has been the league's workhorse, toting the ball 116 times and averaging 3 yards a try. Manders has picked up 379 yards to 358 for the Packer back.

With the exception of Baugh, the Redskins are far back of the leaders.

Nearing Season's End:

Choice Games Mark Final Grid Clashes

Army-Navy Battle Tops Program; Other Contests Have Bearing on Bowl Bids

By Bill Boni

Associated Press Sports Writer

New York, Nov. 26.—It is a small, if compact, program which has been saved for this final week of the 1941 college football season. But it's not unlike the piece of white meat which the little boy eating his Thanksgiving dinner saves for the last bite. It is a small program, but an exceptionally choice one.

There is the forty-first renewal of the Army-Navy rivalry, more intense than ever in this year of national emergency and promising, through Army's rejuvenation under Earl Blaik, a better game than any in the last four years.

There are games which should unravel most of the New Year's Day bowl snarl—such games as Mississippi-Mississippi State, with the Southeastern Conference lead at stake; all-conquering Texas A. and M.'s clash with Texas, high point of the Southwest Conference campaign; Oregon's challenge to Oregon State, which must win this one to qualify for the Rose Bowl; and Fordham's finale against New York U., which must be a stand-out performance to earn the Rams a post-season bid.

There are also corresponding headaches for the hard pressed forecasters, who hopefully, but hesitantly, goes down the line for the last time this year (some teams first, probable attendance in parenthesis):

- THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 27
- Texas A. and M.-Texas (38,200)—Twenty-four reasons have been offered why Texas was tied by Baylor and beaten by T. C. U. The best reason, probably, is they didn't score enough points. The Aggies all along have been very tough to score on and this corner, fully aware of the danger, strings with Texas A. and M.
- Tulsa-Arkansas (15,000)—A vote for Tulsa.
- FRIDAY, NOVEMBER 28
- Miami-Alabama (25,000)—Alabama.
- SATURDAY, NOVEMBER 29
- Army-Navy (98,000)—The Cadets' one team and a few spares against See, PICKS, Page 26, Column 5
- Marquette over Iowa State—Without too much trouble. See CUDDY, Page 25, Column 1.

By Jack Cuddy.

United Press Staff Writer

EAST
Navy over Army—Betting men have made the Middles a 4-1 favorite, but it's much closer than that because Army will go all out in this traditional clash. However, Navy's superior reserves should turn the trick.

Michigan State over West Virginia—This is one of the program's most dangerous games, but the Spartans have shown great strength in their last two contests.

Boston College over Holy Cross—The Eagles seem at least one touchdown better.

Fordham over New York U.—This should be a walk-over.

Pittsburgh over Carnegie Tech.—Another push-over.

MIDWEST

Oklahoma over Nebraska—This will be an all-out brawl, but the Sooners seem to have more scoring punch.

Marquette over Iowa State—Without too much trouble.

Zivic Wins By Decision Over Phil Furr

By Tony Neri

Washington's Phil Furr staged one of the greatest fights of his career last night at Uline's Arena but the earlier margin compiled by Fritz Zivic was too much to overcome as the Pittsburgh battler gained a unanimous ten-round decision.

The former world's welterweight champion opened with a terrific barrage in the first round and continued the pace until the fifth, from where Furr's determined bid nearly turned the tide of battle.

A disappointing crowd of 2816, which paid $4894 at the gate, was treated to a brilliant match from start to finish.

Zivic Finitized

On The Post score sheet, Zivic was given the first four rounds; the fifth and ninth were scored as even, and Furr was given the sixth, seventh, eighth and tenth. But the wide early lead proved decisive for Zivic.

Zivic was penalized in two rounds for low blows the sixth and eighth. There was one knockdown and that came in that whirlwind first round. Fritz caught Phil coming in and sent him down, but for no count.

In those early heats, Zivic's masterful lefts had Furr puzzled. He staggered the Washington boy in his own corner with a left to the face and followed with a short right into the pit of the stomach.

Zivic had Furr missing in the next round. Again the former champion cornered Furr and administered the same punishment—lefts to the face and then short rights to the body. Furr appeared helpless at this point. But in the next round he came out fighting, connecting with a one-two before Zivic maneuvered him near the ropes.

Furr was pushed through the ropes while the crowd jeered.

Furr Rallies

In the seventh round Zivic caught Furr punishing blows. The Washington boy's left hand got entangled in the ropes and Fritz immediately pounced and standing off his foe, he followed with lefts that shook

Texas, Aggies Renew Grid Rivalry Today

By the Associated Press

College Station, Tex., Nov. 26.—Texas A. and M. faces its greatest test along the gridiron trail tomorrow—a rival that lives for victory in one game a year.

Grim, determined, vengeful Texas comes here for the forty-eighth meeting in this storied series that began back in the gray 90's—back when transportation facilities were so poor they couldn't get a crowd at College Station and played the game in the State's major cities.

The Aggies put one of the greatest records in college football on the line: two Southwest Conference championships and one tie in three years while winning 28 of 29 games. Texas, frustrated in its greatest bid for national fame, can salvage its most disappointing season—thus far—with a victory. The boys along betting rows are giving odd odds the Longhorns won't do it.

Texas was the team expected to be wearing the conference title today. For six games the Longhorns were hailed as the greatest in the Nation. Then something slipped. Downrodden Baylor tied Texas. Texas Christian beat Texas. In two weeks the greatest team in Southwest Conference history was out of the race.

But there is one thing left that Texas might do to redeem itself. And as Coach D. X. Bible said, "There's a lot to fight for, not the least of which is our self-respect."

College Station was a mad jumble today as the first contingents of the 38,000 persons expected to see the game began rolling into town.

Despite the fact that A. and M. is unbeaten and untied there was little bowl talk—either officially or unofficially. A. and M. knows too well what can happen as a Texas game to speak of anything except that clash.

Cool, dry and partly cloudy was the forecast.

Dudley Averages 202 Yards for New Record

Cavalier Star Rushes, Passes 1824 Yards in 9 Games; Schwenk Sets Pass Mark

By the Associated Press

Seattle, Nov. 26.—The football season is roaring down the stretch, and the cleats are clattering through intercollegiate gridiron records.

The American Football Statistical Bureau reported today two individual records had been smashed, and more may fall Saturday.

Bill Dudley, of Virginia, concluded his nine-game season last week with 1824 yards rushing and passing. This total offensive figure is his for a nine-game season, as also is his average of 202.7 yards per game.

Davey O'Brien, of Texas Christian, accumulated 1847 yards in 10 games 1938 for a 184.7-yard average. Wilbur (Bud) Schwenk, of Washington University in St. Louis, set a new pass completion mark of 103 in 200 attempts, for 1331 yards, and a completion percentage of .515. O'Brien in 1938 set the old mark of 92 completions.

Schwenk, in an even 300 plays (100 rushing and 200 passing), has amassed 1773 yards, for a 221.6 average for eight games. It is likely Dudley's record will be only a week old before it succumbs. Schwenk leads his Washington Bears against St. Louis University Saturday in the team's finale.

Another record endangered is Whizzer White's rushing yardage mark of 1121 established for Colorado in 1937. Frankie Sinkwich, the broken jaw boy from Georgia, already has rushed the ball 1038 yards and may go in front if he has one of his average days Saturday against Georgia Tech. Sinkwich also may achieve a new rushing "work-horse" mark. He's packed the ball 183 times. If he lugs the leather 20 more times he'll surpass the record of 202 rushes set by Jimmy Richardson, of Marquette in 1940.

Total offense (rushing and passing)—Dudley, Virginia, 1824 yards; Sinkwich, Washington (the 2773 yards), 1433; Owen, Texas, 1374; Johnny Podesto, St. Mary's (Calif.), 1136; Derace Moser, Texas A. & M., 1103; Bertelli, Notre Dame, 1075; Andy Tomasi, Temple, 1028; Steve Pilnowicz, Fordham, 982.

Rushing offense—Sinkwich, Georgia, 1038 yards; Dudley, Virginia, 958; Bob Scheiber, Washington, 839; Pat Harder, Wisconsin, 731; Johnny Orsina, Holy Cross, 723.

Forward passing offense (ranked on completions)—Schwenk, Washington (Mo.), 103 completed of 200 attempts for 1331 yards; Price, Texas Mines, 78 of 180 for 806; Bertelli, Notre Dame, 70 of 124 for 1037; Podesto, St. Mary's (Calif.), 61 of 142 for 1000; Madarik, Detroit, 60 of 116 for 832.

Passing offense—Henry Stanton, Arizona, 40 catches for 639 yards; Red Lindow, Washington (Mo.), 39 for 472; McDonald, Tulane, 26 for 433; Nantz, Kansas, 25 for 435; Fritz, Washington (Mo.), 23 for 349; Keating, Detroit, 23 for 368; Turley, Washington (Mo.), 23 for 244.

Derotes one game played but unreported.

Kovacs Has a Word for Amateurism

Frank Kovacs, who signed a contract for a professional tennis tour with Bobby Riggs yesterday, shows his disregard for the amateur side of the game with his most recent trophy

$25,000 Guaranteed For Each

Perry, Budge Also Take 22-Week Trip, Eagles Owner Makes 1st Tennis Promotion

By Bob Considine.

New York, Nov. 26.—Bobby Riggs and Frank Kovacs, first and second-ranking amateur tennis players, tonight turned the rest of the way pro under auspices of Alexis Thompson, young owner of the Philadelphia Eagles.

The announcement came on the heels of Kovacs' suspension last night by the United States Lawn Tennis Association's rules committee. But Thompson pointed out that his negotiations with Kovacs, runner-up to Riggs in the 1941 National Singles, had been progressing for a week.

Twenty-five thousand dollars each was the guarantee lure which persuaded the players to renounce the Simon-pure side of the game. They will begin a Nation-wide tour December 28 with Fred Perry, National professional champion, and Don Budge, former National amateur and professional champion.

Thompson, making his first excursion into tennis promotion, has guaranteed four players a minimum pool of $100,000 to shoot at between the opening night at New York's Madison Square Garden and the termination of the tour after 22 weeks.

No. 1 Gets 38 Per Cent

The young promoter also has devised a novel means of splitting up the players' pool, to avoid the hipodroming aspects of several pro tennis tours of the past. After ten matches are played on a round-robin basis, a ranking list of the four players will be posted. The No. 1 man thereafter will be playing for 38 per cent of each net gate, so long as he remains No. 1. The percentage share for the No. 2 ranking player will be 28 per cent, the other graduations being 21 per cent and 15 per cent.

Opening night pairings put Riggs, who regained his amateur championship this year, against Perry, who regained the pro title which he had yielded several years before to Budge. Budge will meet Kovacs on the opening night. In the doubles, opening night, Riggs and Kovacs will play as a team against the seasoned pros. Doubles line-ups also will rotate and, in an effort to inject perpetual competition into these, Thompson will offer a nightly bonus to the winning side.

Hits 80 Cities

The tour is expected to touch 80 cities. Thompson said tonight that while he realized that earlier tennis promoters had turned down Riggs as a colorless performer, he thought that the tour, as a whole, would be a financial success, since it incorporated the four outstanding players in the world. He said that only one professional tennis tour had failed to gross at least $100,000, and that was the Alice Marble-Marjorie Haden rivalry.

Kovacs sounded off with one of his more memorable blasts at the U. S. L. T. A. while its rules committee was considering his amateur status. Lusty expense accounts rendered by Kovacs at the end of his long 1941 amateur campaign generated the investigation, during which Kovacs was quoted as saying "those

One More Hard Drill, and It's Off to Bowl for All-Met Team

Schoolboys Work Today At Stadium

Take Bus Tomorrow At 11 A. M. for Game In Tobacco Bowl at Richmond Saturday

By Bill Burnett

One more long, strenuous workout at Griffith Stadium, and then it's off to the Tobacco Bowl for the All-Metropolitan schoolboy football team, the cream of Washington's scholastic grid crop selected by a vote of the coaches who have handled the boys all year.

Today's final drill at Griffith Stadium, starting at 3:30, will be marked by another of the scrimmages which have been staged daily since last Saturday. Tomorrow morning at 11 a. m. the squad of 33 boys, a bus headed for Richmond, where the seventh annual Tobacco Bowl game Saturday will send the D. C. stars against Richmond's best, chosen from John Marshall and Thomas Jefferson High.

It's an important date for Washington's youthful aces, if their attitude at yesterday's practice is a yardstick. Depending upon them, they feel, is the high school grid prestige of the Nation's Capital. And they will be ready to show Richmond's stars a powerful front.

From All Sections

Public high players, also named on the All-Metropolitan squad, will be missing on the two-day, all-expense paid trip. Objections raised by their school heads have eliminated them from participation.

The All-Metro squad, however, will represent every section of the city and vicinity. Included among its members are the finest backs and linemen turned out this season, the records backing up each.

George McGowan, Devitt Prep's lightning-heeled runner, wound up his school's schedule with the scoring championship of the city—nine touchdowns in seven games. Elmer Raba, triple-threat from Gonzaga, tossed nine touchdowns passes during the season.

On the line the All-Metro team is marked by a mass of stars. Picking the best is impossible. To mention a very few, there are Francis McNilli, Jim O'Keefe and Jack Evans, tackles; Paul DiMezio and John Grinnell, centers; Henry Grimm, Lou Wilson and Lucas, guards; and Curtis Cordell, Mel Thompson and "Buck" Newsum, ends.

High spot of yesterday's drill was the return to action of Murphy, Gonzaga's quarterback, who was forced out of two drills with a neck injury. It was also found that damage to O'Keefe's nose will not keep him out of Saturday's battle.

Arlington Pin Team Trips Lucky Strike

The Arlington Aces maintained their pace in the Men's District League last night at the expense of the Lucky Strike boys by tripping the champions twice to remain out in front by a three-game margin over Rosslyn and Convention Hall.

In the Arlington victory Elvin Shank and Paul Jarman led with respective totals of 390 and 383, while Hokie Smith's 146-389 and Dave Burrows' 356 topped the losers.

Hi-Skor improved its standing by a triple triumph over Hieser's Bethesdaans, with Lou Pansky the main spring after 155-439, despite Paul James' 146-405 for the losers. Convention Hall scored a sweep over Hyattsville with Tony Santini's 156-392 and Dave Singer's 388.

The main blows Georgetown improved its position considerably with a whitewash of Peacock's Bethesda team, with Milt Walker's 162-425 the main reason. Brooklyn took the odd tilt from Lafayette, with George Allen's 144-378 and Abe Povich's 141-369 topping the winners.

Ernie Hauser had 141-377 and Astor Clarke 362 for the losers. Bill Krauss' 148-400 won two for Rosslyn against Spillway, despite Cletus Pennell's 147-417. Chick Darr's 163 was high game for the night, but Clarendon dropped the odd game to Arcadia, on which Fred Murphy was tops with 381.

John Chaney's 154-385 and Lindsay Stott's 135-389 led King Pin to two games from Del Ray, on which Lou Jenkins was best pinsman, with 146-392. Bill King's 150-414 for Penn was wasted, as the team dropped the odd game to the Ice Palace, with George Linkins leading with 141-373. Lou Pansky, Hi-Skor, had high set of 439. Brookland high team game of 655 and a 1924 set by Hi-Skor were best for the night.

Army-Navy Broadcast To Cover the World

Schenectady, N. Y., Nov. 26 (AP).—The Army-Navy football game Saturday will be broadcast to all parts of the world for the benefit of members of the United States armed service and other Americans.

General Electric Co. said today the game will be carried by its three international short-wave radio stations, WGEO and WGEA in Schenectady, sending to Europe and Latin America, and KGEI, San Francisco, broadcasting to the Far East.

How to Figure Skate—Lesson V

After Learning Four Edges, Skater Is Ready for Change of Edge

1. Lillian Mae Tribby, women's professional at Chevy Chase Ice Palace demonstrates "change of edge" at the center of the semicircle

2. Just about to change edge from the outside to an inside

3. After change of edge has been made, skater is well on way to complete full circle

Knees Vital In Execution Of Movement

By Norval Baptie

After learning to skate the four edges, as described in the previous articles the skater is now ready to skate the change of edge, consisting of a semi-circle on the right outside forward edge, followed by a change of edge to the right inside forward edge to a complete circle, all accomplished on one foot. The skater then steps to a left inside edge, makes a semi-circle, changes to a left outside edge and completes a full circle. The figure thus makes three circles of equal size and both changes of edge are skated at right angle to the long axis.

To skate this figure the skater commences the right outside edge as described in the plain circle eight. As the skater approaches the half circle or change of edge position the balance foot has been brought forward and the arms rotated to the left of the body. The balance foot is then swung backward and the arms rotated to the right to make the change of edge (from outside to inside). The skater now completes a full inside edge forward circle as described in lesson 1.

To complete the second half of this figure (the inside to outside edge), start the left inside edge as previously described and skate the semicircle as you would the inside forward circle and to make the change of edge bring the right (or balance foot) and left arm (which has been carried forward at this point) backward placing the body on a firm outside edge and complete the balance of the left outside edge circle as described in lesson No. 2.

During the progress of these two figures the skating knee should be well bent before and after the change of edge, but during the change the skating knee should be quite straight. The eyes should be following the print to be skated several feet in advance of the body. The above is also skated by starting on the left outside edge forward.

Brewers Win Debut, 43-42, Defeating Wilmington Club

Special Dispatch to The Post
Wilmington, Del., Nov. 27.—The Heurich Brewers made a successful debut in the American Pro Basketball League tonight by defeating Wilmington's Bombers, 43-42, in a 5-minute overtime game.

Nat Frankle, of Heurich, provided his team's victory margin with a three-pointer after Wilmington had taken the lead at 41-40. Frankle scored a basket on a lay-up shot, and when fouled, made good on the conversion. The Bombers had forged ahead on a foul shot and made their last but futile point just before the final whistle on Fliegel's charity flip.

Frankle, with 12 points, was the game's leading scorer.

Engravers Take Lead In Post Pin League

Engravers, sparked by Bob Ellis with 346 and Clayton Fike with 132-336, broke the first-place tie with Linotypers in the Washington Post Afternoon League by taking three games.

Replaters, led by Jess Humphries with 324, moved into fourth place by taking the odd game from Proofroom. Streetsales, with only two members appearing, forfeited three to the Mailers, who gained a tie for second place.

Loyola Grid Squad Quits Strike Plan

By the Associated Press

Los Angeles, Nov. 26.—A threatened walkout abandoned, Loyola University's varsity football team went through its customary workout late today after seven players petitioned school authorities to retire the Rev. R. H. Shepherd, veteran director of athletics.

The petition, signed by team captain Bill McCarthy and six others, expressed complete confidence in Coach Marty Brill and his staff, but complained about "the actions and the attitude of the athletic directors."

Dissatisfaction with Father Shepherd's administration evidently had been brewing among the players some time, but an incident regarding traveling jackets touched off the threatened players' strike yesterday.

The school asked for the jackets, worn by the squad on its trip to play New Mexico at Albuquerque last Saturday. Players refused to give them up, contending that since many of them were subject to army draft they might not receive regulation letter sweaters after the football season closed.

Vitt Hails Boudreau Promotion, Calls Him 'Natural Leader'

Ex-Indian Manager Says Lou Will Advance 80% Faster Than Others

By the Associated Press

Oakland, Calif., Nov. 26.—Fiery Oscar Vitt, whose management of the Cleveland Indians ended in a players' insurrection, hailed today the promotion to manager of his youthful protégé, Lou Boudreau.

Vitt, who will pilot the Hollywood club of the Coast League next season, described Boudreau as "a natural born leader, no question of it. The only question is whether his age will prove a handicap in handling the older players. I doubt it. 'The kid has it.' He's one of those who come along about every 15 years. I knew he had the stuff that makes leaders when I first laid eyes on him. He joined us in spring training at New Orleans in 1939 as a third baseman. He had such a remarkable pair of hands I could see 'shortstop' sticking out all over him. Anyhow, we had Ken Keltner for third base. Boudreau made good at a month at the end of the season. 'Boudreau is college educated and has the additional advantage of having plenty of the old savvy. He has real baseball instinct. I've seen him make plays on snap judgment basis that fellows with 20 years experience wouldn't think of. He makes friends quickly and while he hasn't had a lot of experience, I think he will advance 80 per cent faster on the job than most others would.

Army Plans For 9 Games On '42 List

By the Associated Press

West Point, Nov. 26.—Army's 1942 football team will play a nine-game schedule, meeting Lafayette, Cornell, Penn and V. P. I. at home, the Army Athletic Association announced today.

Lafayette, V. P. I. and Cornell replace The Citadel, V. M. I. and West Virginia.

The schedule:

Mason-Dixon Cross-Country Set Saturday

The first annual Mason-Dixon Conference cross-country championships will be held at American University Saturday at 2:30 p. m. rain or shine.

Entries have been received from six schools, namely, American University, Gallaudet College, Catholic University, Bridgewater College, Johns Hopkins University and Loyola College, of Baltimore. Entries are expected from Washington College, of Chestertown, Md., and Maryland State Teachers College, of Towson, Md. Randolph-Macon College, of Ashland, Va., will not be represented because its coach, Pat Bynum, recently enlisted in the country's armed forces.

On past performances Bridgewater probably will be the favorite since it boasts a one-sided victory over Catholic University, 10 to 30, and a tie with Roanoke Recreation Center. Johns Hopkins has lost to Swarthmore, Haverford and West Chester Teachers, while winning over Loyola. Gallaudet defeated American and Catholic Universities, in that order, in a triangular meet 19-23-44. Little is known about Washington College, save it always is dangerous.

Individual honors should be keenly contested among Diehl and Flory, of Bridgewater; Doyle, of C. U.; Collison, of Hopkins; Elliott, of Gallaudet, and Herb Wood, of American University.

Bridgewater College—Hunter McGowan, '42 (captain); Sidney Berger, '43; Ray Flory, '43; John Glick, '43; Ralph Reiter, '44; Paul Foster, '44; Kolmer Spanzier, '44; Floyd Mitchell, '45.

Johns Hopkins University—Bert Collier, '42 (captain); Sidney Berger, '43; John Angel, '44; Warren Kuhn, '44; Phil Dunn, '45; Paul Albright, '45; Jake Schlenger, '46.

Gallaudet College—George Elliott, Ken Calvin, Arnold Dalton, John Calvin, Calvin George, Richard Mullins.

Loyola College—'44: Wilson, '44: Hunter, '44: McKenny, '45; Melbow, '45; Du, '45; Koyrnan, '45; Thompson, '45; Hall, '45.

American University—Herb Wood, William Reine, Lena Glatt, Ned Krasnowski.

Army Coach Fearful, Navy Confident Over 42d Grid Game

Blaik Fears Foe Has Too Much Power

West Point Rooters
Optimistic Though
Coach Worries Over
Three-Deep Middies

By the Associated Press
West Point, N. Y., Nov. 26.—The spirit's willing, but Red Blaik is just a little afraid Army's flesh may be weak when Navy starts to turn loose its manpower in the annual service football shindig at Philadelphia Saturday.

The whole Military Academy, from the mustacheless majors down to the rawest Plebe, is as high as the Empire State roof over Army's chances of getting the other guys' goat in Philadelphia Saturday, but Head Coach Red Blaik, who knows what he has—and hasn't—got on the bench isn't sure.

"Naturally," he pointed out today, "I always think my team has a chance, in every game it plays. But when a club is as deep as Navy all the way across the line and in the backfield, and when you stop to figure out that we haven't anything to cheer about when you get past our first string—well, then it's just a question of time until that manpower begins to tell."

"Navy's worn down the other fellows in every game its played. First the first team operates on you for a half. Then the second string goes to work on you. Just about the time your tongue's hanging out, back comes the first set to trample all over you."

"The best thing that could happen to us would be some smart citizen to work out a system so that Saturday's game could be played as two first halves—say morning and afternoon, or, maybe, Saturday afternoon and Sunday."

"The way it looks now, we'll have to play an all-out ball game to even be in the game."

Thus, you get a rough idea of the workout Red's crying towel is getting this week, but just as it was before Army pulled its parade of rabbits out of the hat to the Notre Dame, the players and the Cadets are pool-pooling the head man's message.

Red even contends that Navy will be tougher for Army than the Irish because of the extra manpower. Yet the Cadets around here have their traditional art decorated bedsheets hanging out of every dormitory window telling just what their guys are going to do to the Sailors come Saturday.

Navy "Brains" Frame Dark Plot for Army

ers in all offensive departments. Wayne Miller is tenth in pass receiving, Frank Filchock eighth among the ball carriers, Joe Aguirre fourth in field goals with two, while the Redskins cannot place a man among the first 17 scorers.

The Packers lead even the Chicago Bears in first downs and yards gained passing; per game, that is. Only the New York Giants have had few points scored against them.

The potent Packers will be well-supported favorites Sunday, but the Redskins can point out that games are not won in the statistics column and they are still intent on at least knocking the Packers out of the Western race, to get some satisfaction out of what has been a disappointing season.

Two-Hour Workout

The Redskins worked for two hours yesterday morning and Coach Ray Flaherty pounded a Don Hutson defense into them during most of the Griffith Stadium session, Joe Aguirre, Al Krueger, and a half-dozen others portrayed Hutson to the best of their ability while Sammy Baugh passed labell fashion. The same procedure is on tap for today.

The Redskins stack up as good or probably a better team than the Packers except for two men, Hutson and Hinkle. Baugh certainly deserves the edge over Isbell, but the 'Skins cannot come close to matching Hinkle or Hutson so they must find a way to stop them if they want to pull a major upset Sunday.

The Packers continued their Central Park workouts in New York yesterday and completed plans to arrive here Friday at 7:30 p. m. and take quarters at the Ambassador Hotel. They will workout at Georgetown University Saturday between noon and 2 p. m.

Hoyas Depart For Game With Xavier

Looking to their third meeting on record with a Cincinnati college eleven, Georgetown's football Hoyas train at 8:30 tonight for Saturday's game with Xavier College.

Victorious in games with Cincinnati University in 1922 and 1936, Georgetown will be seeking to keep intact its record of never having lost to an eleven of that city.

Xavier, however, promises to be a formidable test. Though the little Jesuit school has only about 400 students from which to draw its football players, it has come up with an impressive victory.

The Musketeers have won eight of nine games—Kentucky being the exception—and have rolled up the impressive total of 243 points to but 41 for their opponents.

Since Georgetown is a Jesuit rival and perhaps the biggest "name" team on its schedule, Xavier has been pointing all year for the Hoyas, and its student body actually expects a victory, which would be an upset, according to the odds makers.

The Hoyas, now midst a three-game winning streak after a bad start, will be full strength for the Musketeers, and anxious to cap their worst season in four years with an impressive victory.

Yesterday the Hoyas worked out a defense against Xavier plays, most of them a la Notre Dame, since the Musketeers' coach is Clem F. Crowe, a former Irish gridman. Hap Hardell, Georgetown's own freshman coach who scouted Xavier in its overwhelming Thanksgiving Day victory over Providence College, reports that the Musketeers run from four different formations.

Four Formations

The four formations are the regular Notre Dame box, the single wing, the double wing and the "T." Naturally then, Georgetown will be hard taxed to devise defensive maneuvers to cover any Xavier thrust.

In today's final home workout for the game, the Hoyas will drill again on the defense, with the freshmen presenting Xavier plays. The Georgetown squad is scheduled to arrive in Cincinnati at 8:30 a. m. Friday, and will practice at Xavier Stadium in the afternoon. Georgetown alumni of Cincinnati will hold a dinner-dance for both teams Saturday evening. The Hoyas will leave for home at 6:30 p. m. Sunday.

Cleveland Clippers Lose After Two Years

The Cleveland Park Y. M. C. A. 120-pound gridgers snapped a two-year winning streak of the Cleveland Clippers yesterday by winning, 6 to 0, on Hearst Field, Jack Berrier's pass to John Gerachis, good for 40 yards, provided the decisive margin.

The Y. M. C. A. team finished the season with a record of four victories and one tie, while the losers ended with three wins and a tie, the deadlock being with the "Y" boys.

Annapolis Holds Wild Grid Rally

3000 Middies to Send Team Off to Philly at 6:30 A. M. Today for Saturday's Classic

By the Associated Press
Annapolis, Md., Nov. 26.—A wildly cheering idishman regiment at a football rally tonight urged its Navy gridiron team in no uncertain terms to "Sink the Army" in the forty-second service clash Saturday in Philadelphia's Municipal Stadium.

Assembled on the terrace of Bancroft Hall, the high-spirited midshipmen let their gridders really know they expect a third consecutive triumph over the West Pointers.

Middle Coach Swede Larson, Line Coach Rip Miller, Rear Admiral Russell Willson, Naval Academy superintendent, and Bob Froude and Dick Opp, captains of the first and second teams, respectively, spoke to the regiment. The Academy's 75-piece band furnished the music.

Tomorrow the 3000 midshipmen, rallying around a bonfire on Faragut Field, will give the football squad a rousing sendoff before it entrains at 6:30 p. m. for the Manufacturers Country Club, near Philadelphia. The squad practices Friday at the Temple University Stadium.

Academy authorities said Melissa, a female schnauzer dog with boxing ability, and Bill IX, Navy's goat, would both be taken to the contest. Each will have special attendants.

Earlier today, the gridders participated in a dummy scrimmage against the junior varsity, which employed Army plays. The Jayvees wore West Point jerseys and each player was given the name of an Army griddier.

Particular attention was paid to pass defense, since Army's Hank Mazur has demonstrated he really can hurl the pigskin. Yesterday Larson gave his operatives their last taste of hard scrimmage and he said they didn't look any too impressive.

Hoyas to Play Fordham in '44 In New York

Georgetown University announced yesterday that relations will be renewed with Fordham, November 11, 1944, in New York.

In renewing a series begun away back in 1890 and covering 17 games, Georgetown has plucked one of the plums of the football world, for during the last four years the Rams have been among the country's leading gridiron powers.

Georgetown and Fordham last met in 1927 when G. U. won, 39-0. In the 17 games between the two Jesuit rivals, Georgetown won ten, lost four and tied three.

Between 1927 and the present time Georgetown had had annual contact with New York college elevens, playing Manhattan and N. Y. U. And, just as with Fordham, the Hilltop asserted its superiority over these two opponents. The Hoyas won five, lost four and tied two with N. Y. U. and took four, dropped two and tied one with Manhattan.

DeCorrevont Supported by Schoolmates

"De Correvont was just a little misguided in his public relations. The kid's all right. Don't get him wrong. He may have had a little bad advice or been egged on. The wrong people pound out advice to him."

De Correvont, in New York to play Sunday with the New York Yankees of the American professional league in a charity football game, said in the interview that he had closed his collegiate gridiron career with many regrets.

"The fact I wasn't an All-American isn't the reason I have closed college football with many regrets," he said. "For a number of reasons, I don't believe my full football possibilities were brought out. I have always felt that I could play football. I have a feeling of regret, not regret that I didn't make the All American team, but rather a feeling that I could have played better on the field than on the bench. You can't be picked all-anything on the bench."

De Correvont, the most sought-after player in the history of the game when he was graduated from Chicago's Austin High School where he personally scored 311 points in his senior year, denied rumors, as he has before, that his Northwestern teammates refused to block for him, the highly publicized prep star who was a cinch to make All-American three years running.

Asked why he chose Northwestern he again expressed his disappointment over the way he was handled as a player when he answered:

"I had read and had been told that flexibility was a definite mark of Waldorf-coached teams—that he built his offense according to the material, and not to any grooved style."

"This fact seemed to further my own chances of making good in college football, but I was wrong."

Bill readily acknowledged a coach's right to make substitutions, but concerning his replacement by Otto Graham in the Notre Dame game when the Wildcats were in scoring position he said:

"Was I tired? The answer is—No."

Zivic, Zivic managed to jarr Phil with a right as the bell sounded.

While many ringers stood up during a commotion in the stands, Furr and Zivic were battling for all their worth. The tenth round packed thrill upon thrill as they connected with telling blows. Zivic opened the round in the same style as the early rounds, hitting Furr with both hands but Phil came back with a terrifically of his own which had Zivic dodging some and catching others.

The fight was a crowd-pleaser from beginning to end and Zivic rightfully won, but the courage and spirit shown by Furr can be applauded.

After the fight negotiations were opened for a return match, probably December 15, Matchmaker Atell, although disappointed at the turnout, voiced enthusiasm for a return go.

Furr announced that he would rest for a few days before making a definite decision. Zivic left immediately after the fight for his home. He is scheduled to fight Harry Weekly in Cleveland next week.

Harkins Wins
In the eight-round semiwindup, Wickey Harkins, of Germantown, Pa., overcame Al Franklin's holding tactics to pound out a popular decision. Harkins centered his attack on the Washington boy's body, getting some good wallops in before Franklin resorted to holding. The winner suffered a cut under his left eye in the seventh round. Franklin managed to get in a few bolo punches and a good right in the late rounds. Franklin weighed 150½, Harkins 148.

In a scheduled six-round match, Oscar (Thunderbolt) Wright, local lightweight, knocked out Manuel Rosa, of Baltimore, in 2:40 of the third round. Wright floored Rosa with a left hook for a nine fight and followed with a right which finished the Baltimore fighter.

The opening four-rounder went to Johnny Como, a protege of Zivic's, by decision over Jackie Cranford, of Washington. It was a close fight. The winner weighed 153 and Cranford 162½.

Low Bass, local middleweight, punched out a four-rounder over Kid Wolf, another local boy. Bass came in at 158 and Wolf 155.

Dempsey Gives Zivic a Hot Foot —Over the Air

Fritz Zivic was "hot" on the air yesterday afternoon.

Zivic, Phil Furr, whom he met in a ten-round fight last night, and Jack Dempsey, the former heavyweight champion of the world, were being interviewed by Russ Hodges on his sports program over Station WOL when Dempsey applied the hot-foot to Fritz.

Fritz yelled over the air and stomped his foot before he knew what Dempsey had done. The little comedy ended in laughter. Dempsey was in town on business and attended last night's fights at Uline Arena.

Huskers Drill Hard For Sooners Game

Lincoln, Nebr., Nov. 26 (AP).—Scrimmage in a liberal dose was handed out to Nebraska's football squad today in preparation for the game here Saturday against Oklahoma, when a Nebraska win will give the Huskers a tie for second place in the Big Six Conference. The scout club used Oklahoma plays against the varsity and gained more ground than the coaches liked. Following the scrimmage, the Huskers, at full strength for the first time this week, gave their own offensive maneuvers a polishing up. Tomorrow, Nebraska's Thanksgiving Day, the Huskers will work out in the morning.

Clyde Tolson Captures $500,000 Handicap at Bowie

Emanuel's Omission Nosed Out

By Walter Haight
A Staff Correspondent

Bowie, Md., Nov. 26.—Four horses ran into the finish line in team fashion this afternoon. Two horses were stopping and two were charging. After the judges had consulted the photograph of the thrilling blanket finish to the eighth running of the W. P. Burroughs Memorial Handicap, the winner was G. R. Watkins' Clyde Tolson by a nose margin over Victor Emanuel's Omission. A half-length farther back was B. A. Neal's Speed to Spare for third while a neck off the show position came Mrs. Walter M. Jeffords' Dawn Attack in the annual spirit of 6 furlongs.

The triumph was the eighth for Clyde Tolson in ten races over this track since he came to the turf three years ago. Jockey Paul Keiper and enough lead to make it 121 pounds was shouldered by the 4-year-old son of Carlisle and Edina. He was clocked in 1:12.5 by the official clocker, remarkable time for 6 furlongs over the slow track. The record for stake is 1:13 and held by Honey Cloud, the 1938 winner.

Due to his defeat at this meeting by Mrs. Ethel D. Jacobs' Air Bridge, an also ran in today's race, Clyde Tolson returned a $14.70 payoff for each $2 investment.

First In Front

Speed to Spare was first to show in front when starting and it appeared for a while as if the race was between these two. Then Omission, ridden by Jockey Don Meade, came along to start a rush. Keiper turned Clyde Tolson loose at this stage and the two moved together on the outside. At the wire, it was anybody's race. Clyde Tolson was nearest the camera. Many bets were made that Omission was the winner but the favorite outvoted those of that opinion.

Crowning Eastern High School's huge intramural basketball tournament, the junior class champions nosed out the sophomore titlists, 15-14, yesterday.

Evidencing the trend toward expansion of intramural sports in public high schools, this tournament, directed by Sam Fox, drew 42 entries—making it the largest basketball tournament ever held in a local high school gym. The tournament has been running since early October.

Fox was enthusiastic over the interest exhibited in the tournament from the standpoint of both the players and the spectators. The team 214-6. P. T. Team 23-3. P. T. "Berlin Diary," the best-selling account of William L. Shirer's experiences as CBS Berlin correspondent, is being transcribed into Braille, and also has been recorded as a "Talking Book" for the blind.

Shirer, who once had an accident that threatened his own sight, read enough from the book to fill the first disc of the "Talking Book" recording himself. A radio announcer finished recording the thick volume.

A blind person may "read" a talking book by playing the records on his phonograph. "Berlin Diary" comprises 32 double-sided, 12-inch discs—which take 16 hours to play.

The "Talking Books," of which 125 copies usually are pressed, are made by the American Foundation for the Blind and distributed throughout the United States by the Library of Congress. They are a boon to the approximate three-quarters of America's 30,000 adult blind who cannot read Braille.

The Braille edition of "Berlin Diary" is being done for the American Red Cross by Amelia S. Jaskow, of New Rochelle, N. Y. Miss Jaskow, working by hand on the one copy to be made, expects to finish the task soon after the first of the year.

The edition, to be housed by the Red Cross in one of America's Braille libraries, will run to 12 volumes, averaging 88 of the big, heavy Braille pages. The Red Cross is to lend it by mail to blind persons.

"MARY BARRON"
THE SLIPS THAT
'SLIP CONSCIOUSNESS' IN AMERICA

Women who value their charm and chic wear Mary Barron slips. They know the utter comfort of wearing a slip that never pulls down, rides, or twists around. That's because Mary Barron has patented a not-to-be-duplicated way of cutting the fabric, so that it can't ride up from the bottom or pull down on the straps. You'll have to come in and look at the slip to know what makes that possible. You'll have to try one on . . . then you'll discover that the bias cut in the back gives you freedom for action. You'll discover that the scientific cut of the slip does away with those unseemly bulges over the hips and permits your dress to mold itself to your figure in repose or action. Lace trimmed and tailored styles . . . in rayon satin, half sizes or regular sizes 31½ to 37½ and 32 to 44. In tearose and white.
